

ROOSEVELT AND CHURCHILL RULE OUT PEACE WITH 'NAZI TYRANNY'

Conference Seen As Grave Warning To the Japanese And Vichy Regime

Agreement Reached by Roosevelt and Churchill
Looked upon in London
as Fatal to Hitler

LONDON, Aug. 14 (P)—Three supreme American commitments to the world—to help reconstruct post-war Europe, to support the British and Russians on every front and to aid in stripping aggressor nations of their weapons—were made in the joint declaration of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill informed London comment held today.

These among all others, said British informants, stood out in the eight points stating a common and solemn resolve for "a better future for the world"—a democratic manifesto to the nations and people of the earth.

But great and grave implications were seen as well in what was left unsaid; in what had been decided by president and prime minister in a meeting without precedent somewhere in the silences of the Atlantic.

"Grand United Stand"

Some observers called their agreement a grand united stand, extending from Malay to Alaska, which has instantly and sharply braked, if it had not actually forestalled, Japanese advances in the South Pacific and further concessions to the Nazis by Vichy France.

"These observers—flushed with that spirit which moved men in London to make the frequent toast on this joyous night, 'here's to the two of us; let 'em come'—saw it as the avowal of a mighty common front between republic and empire.

They drew three cardinal conclusions, based on their belief that the greatest results of the conference were not revealed and meant this:

Three Conclusions

1. That there had been a shaping by military, naval and air staffs of a definite strategic policy against Japan, an understanding on positive action should Vichy allow the Nazis to occupy Dakar and Casablanca in Africa, and a world-embracing strategy covering the military and air contingencies raised by the present Nazi position in Russia.

2. That the United States would give unstinted aid to Russia and all other powers fighting with the Allies and that Britain would waive priorities on certain classes of material to speed them to Russia.

3. That the United States and Britain would assume the police power of the world at the war's end, although all nations—including Germany—would be allowed to determine their own form of government.

Discuss Japanese Situation

It was seen as wholly probable by British sources that Japan was up for much discussion. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, it was believed, had determined the precise moment and circumstances under which their governments would cease passive resistance and take action against the Japanese—perhaps from British and American bases whose mutual use had been agreed upon.

Moreover, it was declared, they might well have agreed to ask Russia to open a northern front with a Siberian force of 1,000,000 men if

Many Millions of Dollars Wasted Building Camps, Senator Charges

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—A charge that war department inefficiency resulted in the waste of several hundred million dollars in the camp construction program was laid before the Senate today and the department immediately replied that mistakes were due to lack of funds for advance planning.

The accusation was made in a report of the special Senate defense investigating committee which has been inquiring into the preparedness effort since last spring.

Chairman Truman (D-Mo.) said in submitting the report that the war department had shown "a lack

Encirclement of Black Sea Ports Claimed by Nazis

Odessa and Nikolaev Surrounded, Berlin Statement Declares

BERLIN, Aug. 14 (P)—Crediting Italian, Rumanian and Hungarian Allies with assistance, the German high command today claimed encirclement of Odessa and Nikolaev, Black Sea ports, within a wide-swinging offensive that planted the Swastika in the iron center of Kriwoi Rog, half-way across the southern Ukraine.

Kriwoi Rog was said to have been occupied by German speed troops. It lies in the basin of the lower Dniester river, a scant 150 miles from the sea of Azov to the southeast.

The announcement was the first official intimation that German land forces were getting close to Dnepropetrovsk, the great industrial center which the Germans call "the essence of the Ukraine." Kriwoi Rog lies some 80 miles south west of Dnepropetrovsk.

Germans and Rumanians were said to have reached the Black Sea between the port of Odessa and the Bug river estuary in a "continuous relentless pursuit" and Russian forces, trapped by the advance, were reported preparing to try a Dunkerque-like withdrawal by sea.

"The air force yesterday struck severe blows against transports held in readiness for the flight of Soviet troops in the coastal areas of Odessa and Nikolaev," said the army's report. "Two transports totaling 14,000 tons were destroyed and five other large ships were badly damaged."

Another report said that seven merchant vessels were sunk and seventeen others damaged by the Luftwaffe in Black Sea ports up to yesterday.

DNB said 110 Russian planes had been destroyed in the past twenty-four hours.

Sweatbox Death Of Negro Blamed To Prison Warden

New Inquiry Started into Georgia's State Penal System

TRENTON, Ga., Aug. 14 (P)—The death of one of twenty-two negro convicts locked for twelve hours in a tiny building brought official blame to a warden today and spurred new inquiry into Georgia's much-investigated penal system.

Dade County Coroner W. A. Tidwell said an investigation by lantern light last night in the yard of Rising fawn state highway prison camp, ended when the jury decided the negro, Lewis Gordon, 40, "came to his death due to cruel and inhuman treatment in the hands of the warden of this camp."

Confined after Strike

He said the warden, C. A. Jacobson, told the jury the negroes were confined in the 7 by 7½ foot cell after they staged a sit-down strike and advanced on him with a guard, armed with rocks. No charges have been filed against the warden.

The inquiry was touched off when state prison investigator Claude Mayne, riding to the camp for a routine checkup, met a hearse bearing the body of the negro. He ordered the hearse back to the camp.

The investigation was taken up today by the state prison and parole commission headed by Clem E. Rainey, assisted by representative John L. Mavity, chairman of the State Legislative Penitentiary committee.

Three Prisoners Shot

A disturbance preceded the mass punishment, Coroner Tidwell said and "three of the prisoners were shot and wounded and the remaining twenty-two of the original twenty-five were crowded into the small building Tuesday at 11 a. m. and held there until 11 p. m. that night."

The body of the negro, who was a lifer, was placed on a box in the illuminated prison yard, while jurors questioned the warden and the convicts who had been confined in the thickwalled, darkened cell.

A negro nicknamed "Copperhead" testified:

"We prayed to them and we shouted and told them he was dying for an hour and a half before they came out. They just laughed it off. They'd shout back 'you got in there—go ahead and take it.'"

Berlin Says War Conference Goes Back to Wilson

"A Plagiarism and a Bad
One at That", Germans
Declare

BERLIN, Aug. 14 (P)—The German foreign office mouthpiece, Deutsche Diplomatische Politische Korrespondenz, tonight called the Roosevelt-Churchill program "a plagiarism of President Wilson's points—and a bad one at that."

The publication declared, "the plagiarism can find no drawing power because the authors are the same as those who deceived the world twenty-five years ago by a sham of promises not seriously intended."

In the first detailed German reaction to the British-American outline, the Korrespondenz went on:

"It is an impudent lie when Churchill and Roosevelt maintain that their countries seek neither territorial nor any other kind of enrichment."

"As in the World War, England now aspires to make foreign peoples subject to her which want to be free. As for Roosevelt's policy, it is an important point of his program to acquire economic and military sovereignty not only on the Western Hemisphere but far beyond it."

"This sovereignty does not bother in the slightest about the wishes of interested peoples. They can be brought to reason in case of need with bombs, blackmail or bribery of suitable party groups."

Roosevelt Known To Have Boarded British Warship

Photographed Talking with Churchill Aboard
Prince of Wales

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—The White House disclosed tonight that at least one of the conferences between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill took place aboard the British battleship Prince of Wales.

A photograph of the president and Prime Minister was handed out bearing the caption:

"Aboard H. M. S. Prince of Wales after church services April 10, 1941." The "April 10" was obviously an error. The caption evidently meant Aug. 10, which was the first day that no word was received in Washington from the president, who had been cruising off New England on the presidential yacht Potomac.

Helped Sink Bismarck

The Prince of Wales, among the newest of Britain's battleships, saw action in the chase which resulted in destruction of the German battleship Bismarck.

A 35,000-ton vessel, the Prince of Wales is a sister ship of the King George V which brought Lord Halifax to this country at the start of his service as ambassador.

The battleship is one of five of the same type which Britain started before the war, the King George V being the first completed. The last of the class was scheduled to be commissioned this year.

In the running battle in the Atlantic with the Bismarck in June, the Prince of Wales traded broadsides with the German naval giant at extreme range for some three hours. Later the British battleship was credited with setting fire to

Lord Beaverbrook Comes to U. S. To Get More Arms and Su

"Biggest Buyer on the Cuff You've Ever Seen"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—Lord Beaverbrook, who described himself as "the biggest buyer on the cuff you've ever seen," flew in from the historic Roosevelt-Churchill conference today and immediately began negotiations to secure more arms and supplies of all kinds for embattled Britain.

"We have had hundreds of millions of dollars worth of benefit under the Lend-Lease program," the dynamic minister of supplies told newspapermen in a rapid-fire interview at the British embassy, "but we need more."

Shipyards Conference Fails To Settle Strike

A conference of L. H. Korndorff, president of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, with high naval officials stirred fresh reports in Washington yesterday (Thursday) of action to end the CIO strike at the firm's Kearny, N. J., yards, but there was no word as to whether any decisions were reached.

It was announced that further conferences would be held today (Friday).

Meantime, one major source of anxiety for defense and labor officials was removed when AFL strikers at the Caldwell, N. J., plant of the Curtiss-Wright propeller division voted to go back to work.

The huge Kearny yards, holding $493,000,000 of contracts for naval and merchant vessels and employing about 17,000 workmen, have been closed since Thursday of last week when the CIO industrial union of marine and shipbuilding workers called a strike.

Union Demands Contract

The union demanded that the company accept a contract clause providing that any union member must keep his dues paid and remain in good standing as a condition to continued employment. The Defense Mediation Board recommended acceptance of the demand, but the company declined, contending that to accept it would mean a closed shop.

Rather than give in on the point, Korndorff offered last Monday to turn the yard over to the navy.

AFL machinists walked out at the Curtiss-Wright propeller factory last Friday — one day after a Labor Relations Board election was won by an unaffiliated union, Propeller-Craft. The plant, holding $100,000,000 of defense orders, continued to operate.

The strikers asked twenty cents an hour increase in a wage scale

ASKS MORE HELP

Lord Beaverbrook

Steps To Defeat Axis Powers Considered by Leaders at Conference

Land Offensive To Crush Nazis Indicated by Lord
Beaverbrook; Welles, Roosevelt's Sons and Others Participate in Discussion of War Moves;
Exact Facts Kept Secret

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—Swift moves to bolster the fight against the Axis appeared in the making tonight after it was revealed that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a dramatic sea parley, had ruled out any peace with the "Nazi tyranny" and had sketched the frame work of a new world order.

Lord Beaverbrook, the British minister of supplies who attended the historic Atlantic conference, flew to Washington to talk with William S. Knudsen, the director of defense production, and other officials about increased American aid.

PREDICT LAND OFFENSIVE

At a press conference, Beaverbrook implied that—soon or late—England expected to launch a land offensive to crush the Nazi armies. A reporter asked if Britain expected to win the war from the air. The British minister stuck out his jaw, glowered, and shouted:

"Bombing from the air don't beat us!"

As for American aid, Beaverbrook said "you've been very generous but we need still more from you."

"If you expect us to do as well as we have done," he added, "send us as much as you can and as swiftly as possible under the generous terms of the Lend-Lease act."

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that one of the series of meetings between President Roosevelt and the prime minister took place aboard the American cruiser Augusta, and another aboard H. M. S. Prince of Wales, new British battleship commissioned since the outbreak of the war and already distinguished in sea annals for her part in the destruction of Germany's Bismarck.

Senate Accepts House Changes In Service Bill

Votes 37 to 17 after Brief
Debate on Important Measure

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—By the top heavy vote of thirty-seven to nineteen, the Senate today accepted House changes in the controversial army service extension legislation and dispatched the measure to President Roosevelt.

Senate attaches said they assumed the bill would be flown to President Roosevelt at sea in order to get it on the books as quickly as possible. General George C. Marshall, the army chief of staff, at originally fixed August 1 as the deadline on which the measure could be enacted without inconvenience to the army.

Vote After Short Debate

The final Senate vote, terminating weeks of dispute in both houses, came after only eight minutes of debate. Although the Senate originally had approved the service extension by a vote of forty-five to thirty, Senator Johnson (R-Calif.) demanded the record vote today.

"There are some of us here who are opposed to this bill," he said, "and we should have a chance to vote on it."

The measure, which passed the House Tuesday by the single-vote margin of 203 to 202, would authorize

Photograph Released

The White House released a photograph showing the two leaders on the Augusta last Saturday night, sitting in wicker chairs under an awning and engaged in animated conversation. At the president's feet was his favorite dog, the scottie Palla. Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, could be seen in the picture, as well as the president's sons, Elliott and Franklin, Jr., who were dressed in their service uniforms. The president, Churchill and other civilians in the picture wore evening clothes.

Another photograph showed Churchill in sea-faring togs and the president in civies, talking aboard the Prince of Wales after church services Sunday.

Although the Roosevelt-Churchill pronouncement, which was issued today as a result of the momentous conferences, was given over principally to an outline of peace aims, there seemed little doubt that their conversations had included exhaustive discussions of the general military situation.

Lending weight to this presumption was the disclosure, also by the White House, that among those at the conferences were:

Others at Conference

General George C. Marshall, United States chief of staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Harry L. Hopkins, Lend-Lease administrator; W. Averell Harriman, who has been handling Lend-Lease affairs at London; Admiral Ernest J. King, commanding the Atlantic fleet of the United States; Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, first sea lord of Britain; and General Sir John Greer Dill, chief of the Imperial British staff.

Unannounced but strongly implied in a momentous joint declaration was agreement on high points of strategy to meet new Axis threats on a far-flung world front—in the

Abandonment of Two Important Cities Announced by Russians

MOSCOW, Friday, Aug. 15—Red troops battling to stem the German drive into the Ukraine have abandoned Pervomaisk and Khovrogod, each about 100 miles northwest and northeast of the strategic Soviet Black Sea port of Nikolaev, the Russians acknowledged early today.

But S. A. Lozovsky, Soviet vice-commissioner for foreign affairs, denied the German claim that the Red army in the Ukraine had been encircled.

Fierce fighting along the whole front from the White Sea in the far north to the Black Sea was reported in the Soviet information bureaus communiqué, and Russian sources said sporadic German pushes east of the Nazis heavily in men and material.

The Red air force shot down or destroyed on the ground seventy-four German planes Wednesday and last twenty-seven aircraft, the communiqué said.

Destruction of a German submarine in the Baltic also was claimed.

The Communist party organ, Pravda, reported that the Thirtieth German tank corps, eleven other divisions and thirteen regiments

Taxes and Roads Big Problems in Farming Sections

Increased Levies on Gas Boost Cost of Trans- portation

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Aug. 14 (P)—Increasing taxation on license tags and gasoline and better highway planning are among the biggest problems confronting the American farmer, Chester H. Gray, director of the national highway users' conference, told members of the Grange lecturers' conference today.

This is so, Gray said, because they are closely related with the vitally important problem of transporting agricultural products to market.

He said that a recent survey by the highway users' conference in fifteen states showed gasoline taxes and vehicle registration fees amount to more than eighty per cent of the general property tax and urged Grange members to take a greater interest in their tax dollar and to find out if the license fee and taxes they pay the filling station are being used for highway construction and maintenance purposes.

Much Money Diverted

"In many states this money is being diverted for other purposes," he asserted.

Gray declared farmers also should take an interest in the way their money is being spent for highway construction.

"We have come a long way during the last 20 years in improved highway construction," he said, "but there is no need to spend $100,000 a mile for a high speed road when a $15,000-a-mile secondary highway will serve just as well for a farm-to-market highway."

The conference director said the reason highways went to pieces so quickly twenty years ago was not because of heavy traffic and trucks but because engineers in those days did not know as much about the effects of weather and drainage on roads construction.

"Just as we are building better highways, we have improved methods of financing them and today we are building more highways by the pay-as-you-go method by floating bond issues," he said.

Mrs. Shaffer Speaks

Other speakers on today's program at the University of Maryland were Mrs. Helen Shaffer, chairman of the Home Economics committee of the Maryland State Grange; Mrs. Mary Barada, lecturer of the Churchville Grange; Homer Remsburg of the Middletown Grange; and Mrs. Lena Renn, superintendent of the Juvenile Grange of Maryland.

This afternoon and evening members of the conference made a tour of points of interest in Washington, closing with a boat trip down the Potomac river.

Speakers for tomorrow will be Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the Maryland Extension Service; L. Pennington of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; Earl C. Baily of the Highland Grange; and Dr. Lindon S. Dodson, sociologist for the University of Maryland.

The four-day session will close tomorrow evening with a banquet in the university dining hall over which Dr. S. C. Catterman, lecturer of the Maryland Grange, will preside. Speaker of the evening will be James C. Farmer, national lecturer for the Grange.

Gigantic Buffalo Plane Plant Dedicated

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 14 (P)—One of the most modernistic air defense factories in the United States, which will boost the Buffalo output of Curtiss pursuit planes to 500 a month, was dedicated today in the presence of government officials and massed thousands of workmen.

The 6,000 a year production will be part of what William S. Knudsen, head of the Office of Production Management, said would be a grand total of 36,000 warplanes of all types a year rolling off American factory assembly lines by mid-1942.

That represents a jump of 1,400 per cent in three years.

The new $18,000,000 plant on the edge of Buffalo's big airport—which is itself being expanded for defense purposes—already is in operation. Together with an older plant a few miles away, it employs 16,800.

Two Sailors Believed Drowned in Crash

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—The navy reported that two sailors were "probably drowned" in the collision of patrol craft 457, formerly the small yacht Trower, and the steamship Norluna off Puerto Rico today. The patrol vessel was sunk.

The missing men are H. D. Osborne, seaman first class, P. C. McKenna, fireman second class, both naval reservists. There were no other injuries, the navy said.

The patrol craft, 107 feet long, was purchased by the navy last August from C. A. Tilt of Chicago for $150,000. It had been rebuilt for patrol duty.

Both the missing men were natives of Baltimore, and enlisted at that city on the same day, September 26, 1940.

Osborne, 28, is survived by his mother Mrs. John E. Osborne, of Baltimore. McKenna, 23, is survived by his wife Mrs. Rose McKenna, also of Baltimore.

Ickes Expected To Ration Gas Given Stations

How They Will Distribute Supplies Is Not Made Clear

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—Apparently convinced that appeals for public curtailment of gasoline consumption had failed, Secretary of Interior Ickes declared today new and "more rigid" measures to meet the threatened shortage in the east were imminent.

The coordinator declined to discuss the contemplated action, but there was speculation that he would call for rationing of gas to filling stations. It was not indicated how the individual service stations would distribute the supplies among automobile operators.

Ickes, who is defense petroleum coordinator, revealed that the first shipment of aviation gasoline to Russia aboard an American tanker was scheduled to leave Los Angeles today for Vladivostok, under United States registry, and that other tankers would sail shortly.

Not in War Zone
Asked if oil ships sailing for Russia under the American flag might not run counter to neutrality laws, the coordinator replied that "there is no war zone over there," meaning the east coast of the U. S. S. R. recently a Japanese official at Tokyo expressed the wish that the United States would not send "munitions" to Vladivostok.

Ickes also revealed that priorities had been obtained for manufacture of 10,000 drums in which to ship aviation gasoline to Russia aboard merchantmen.

"Blackout" Is Failure
Reporting on gasoline consumption during the first week of the filling station "blackout" the coordinator said deliveries were up eight per cent on the Atlantic seaboard, over the previous week, and he declared "there hasn't been any response at all encouraging."

He told the newsmen at his press conference he expected to have special announcement later in the day, dealing with "more drastic steps" and his aides were busy throughout the day working on details of the new measures. But, when the coordination office closed for the day, these aides said the statement was not ready and gave no new indication when it might be issued.

Catholics To Attend Mass at Meade

PORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., Aug. 14 (P)—All Catholics of the twenty-ninth infantry division will be excused from duty for one hour tomorrow morning to attend mass. The day is a Holy day of obligation for members of the Catholic church the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Masses will be offered at 5:45 a. m. at theaters number 3 and 4 and the recreation hall of the one hundred seventy-fifth infantry regiment, all in the division area, and at the A. P. Hill military reservation in Caroline County, Va., where troops of the division's anti-mechanized units are training.

Northern France Bombed by British

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 15 (P)—British bombers struck at northern France in the early morning darkness today in continuation of attacks on Boulogne and the Continental coast during daylight yesterday. Residents of a southeast coast town heard the British planes cross the channel in a steady procession starting just before midnight. A few minutes later German antiaircraft batteries flashed along the French coast and the distant rumble of bomb explosions was heard.

Fourteen German planes were shot down in dogfights over the continent yesterday and five British planes were missing the air ministry reported.

Week-End Traffic Violators Facing Loss of Permits

State of Maryland Plans Severe Penalty as Safety Move

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 14 (P)—Colonel Marion S. Battle, director of the state division of motor vehicles, was advised today that the state of Maryland intends to take away the driving privileges of all persons convicted of violating the state's traffic laws over week-ends when traffic is at its peak.

The letter from Maryland Highway Commissioner W. Lee Elgin advising Col. Battle of his plans follows:

"I would like to acquaint you with the fact that this department is going to take action against the driving privilege of all persons convicted of violating the motor vehicle laws of Maryland over week-ends, in an effort to reduce the ever increasing accident and death rate.

"We took this same action against drivers arrested over the Fourth of July weekend, as a result of which 350 Maryland drivers had their licenses suspended or revoked. Over that weekend, there were six deaths, two out-of-state drivers being responsible for three deaths.

"As out-of-state drivers will be deprived the right to use Maryland highways, as well as Maryland operators, I would appreciate it if you would take the necessary steps to see that your drivers will be acquainted with our policy."

Dr. Smith Victim Of Heart Attack

TILGHMAN, Md., Aug. 14 (P)—Dr. Charles Franklin Smith, 44, Uniontown, Pa., physician, died of a heart attack on Tilghman's island today.

He had been slightly ill for two days and was preparing to go on a fishing trip in Chesapeake Bay this afternoon when he was stricken. With him were his wife, two daughters and a son. He also was accompanied by W. J. White of Uniontown.

A graduate of the University of Maryland, Dr. Smith had practiced medicine in Uniontown for a number of years. He had been a visitor at Tilghman's island for the past fifteen years.

The body was taken to St. Michaels this afternoon from where it will be sent to Uniontown tomorrow.

Roosevelt, Churchill Closely Guarded

LONDON, Aug. 14 (P)—A constantly moving circle of destroyers, patrol boats and other small warships formed a precautionary defensive ring around the Roosevelt-Churchill conference ship, and American planes dived overhead, the Daily Mail said today in a dispatch from its correspondent "somewhere on the American Atlantic coast."

Correspondent Walter Farr said President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill sat on the sunlit deck of the ship "with seagulls wheeling around."

"Occasionally the drone of a big American flying boat patrolling the skies was heard," Farr wrote. "The navy was taking no chance."

From these descriptions the British concluded the conferences took place close to the American shore.

World's Largest Building Planned For War Department

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (P)—The Senate concurred today in House approval of a $35,000,000 appropriation for the World's largest building—a mammoth thirty-four-acre edifice to house the war department.

Funds for the structure, to be erected across the Potomac river in nearby Arlington, Va., were included in a $6,838,436,000 supplemental defense appropriations bill passed by the chamber.

Approximately 40,000 workers could be housed in the three-story building under present plans, although war department officials have said they expected personnel to reach a peak of 30,000 with the balance of the space used for filing and storage.

The Senate rejected, 28 to 20, a proposal by Senator McCarran (D-Nev.) to locate the building in Washington and defeated, 29 to 21, an amendment by Senator Taft (R-Ohio) to halve its cost.

WEST VIRGINIA: Considerable cloudiness and somewhat higher temperature with showers and thunderstorms today and tonight; Saturday partly cloudy with a few scattered showers or thunderstorms in east and south portions.

Eight Points Offered to World Following Conference at Sea

Washington, Aug. 14. (P)—The eight points on which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill said they based their hopes "for a better future for the world" are, in brief:

1. No aggrandizement.
2. No territorial changes imposed by force.
3. Restoration of sovereign rights to those who have been deprived of them by force.
4. Equal enjoyment by all nations of world trade and raw materials needed for prosperity.
5. Improved labor standards, economic advancement and social security for all.
6. A peace assuring safety and tranquility the world over.
7. Freedom of the seas to all.
8. Abandonment by all nations of the use of force and disarmament of aggressive nations pending the establishment of general security.

Youth Fatally Injured in Crash

SYKESVILLE, Md., Aug. 14 (P)—Kenneth Cutsail, 17, of Sykesville was fatally injured today when two cars sideswiped each other on the Liberty road, a mile east of Eldersburg.

The car in which Cutsail was riding plunged down a culvert.

State Troopers R. M. Morris and A. G. McKewen administered first aid to Cutsail and his companion, William McKewen, 25, also of Sykesville and took them to University Hospital, Baltimore, where Cutsail died two hours after being admitted.

Hospital Attendants Said McQuay Was in a Serious Condition with a Broken Leg and Injuries about the Face and One Eye.

The occupant of the second car was uninjured.

British-American Views Old Stuff, French Declare

Repeat Wilson's Fourteen Points, Vichy State- ment Says

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Aug. 14 (P)—The official French information office tonight rejected the British-American war aims as old and inadequate, following up a declaration by Vice-Premier Jean Darlan that he would lead France along the road mapped out by Charles de Gaulle and the Committee of State Petrain—indicating collaboration with Germany.

As a sort of dissonant footnote to this course, news arrived from Paris of bloodshed in riotous public demonstrations in that German-occupied capital on Wednesday.

The information office's quick prepared reaction to today's Roosevelt-Churchill statement of aims read:

"It only repeats in briefer form President Wilson's fourteen points. It does not introduce a single new element into a doctrine which almost twenty-five years ago appeared as having some value."

"Experience has proved this doctrine insufficient to assume peace and justice."

Th commentary was written specifically to accompany publication tomorrow's papers of the Roosevelt-Churchill statement, although the points of the latter were somewhat softened in French translation.

Hay Fever Is One Foe of Mankind That Always Appears on Schedule

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
 However unpredictable Hitler and Stalin may be, there is one enemy of mankind that works absolutely on schedule. That is our old enemy, hay fever. It begins to pollinate about August 15th, so that those who are subject to the late summer and fall type of hay fever are pre-paring to resist their invisible but no less malignant invader.

I want to start out the article with some suggestions that have come in from readers. Here's one from Winchester, Vir-
 "I am in poor health and cannot stand the ordeal of shots for my hay fever. Besides I cannot afford to leave town or have an air-conditioned room. Is it possible to get relief from wearing nose protectors?"

Contains Fallacy

This contains an essential fallacy, because hay fever patients will tell you that their eyes are more troubled than their nose, and inasmuch as there is a connection between the eyes and the nose, and the secretion of the eyes runs down through a duct into the nose, the pollen which alight in the eyes, the account of their salt content, make an ideal solution for pollen and flow down into the nose, causing trouble there no matter whether the nostrils are stopped up or not.

Another suggestion comes from W.
 W. D. of Kansas City: "With the approach of the hay fever season, may I tell you of my experience with it? My father and mother moved from Western Pennsylvania to Kansas to alleviate his asthma and her hay fever, both severe. A brother and sister with severe cases of hay fever, and my own case seems bad enough."

Takes Spray Baths

"With the advent of each season
 I buy a bath spray which hooks on the water spout of the bath, and take one of these spray baths on the year around, but at this season I let the spray play particularly on my throat and upper chest.
 In the evening before dinner, I let this cold spray play on my throat and chest, and again before going to bed, and I hardly know it is the hay fever season. That is, until some evening, I miss the pre-dinner shower or the bedtime shower, and then I suffer as much as anyone may not progress for many years."

Questions and Answers

E. H. G.: "Has a seven-year-old child a chance to outgrow a rheumatic heart caused by acute rheumatic fever?"
 Answer: Acute rheumatic fever affects the heart in different ways.
 If the heart muscle or pericardium alone is effected, the child will probably overcome the valves are affected, the condition is likely to be permanent, but it may not progress for many years."

with burning eyes and running nose.
 That usually happens but once or twice in a season. One feels so well he thinks he can skip it without being penalized, but the pollen gets him.

"My remedy is so simple that sufferers won't believe me—but I would be interested to have you recommend this to a wide number and check the results."

I received this letter last year too late to help sufferers in that hay fever season. I have had no personal experience with the method, and cannot, therefore, give it it publicly and will be glad to hear from my readers what results they have obtained from it.

The Cotton Situation An Ugly Mess

SOME KIND of moral may be drawn, and doubtless should be, from the history of the ugly mess which the administration and Washington have made of the cotton situation.

Eight years ago the AAA set out to raise the price of cotton. President Roosevelt said of cotton, and all other farm crops: "If we cannot do this [raise prices] one way, we will do it another; but it we will." How they did it is almost too complex for human understanding.

One way, of course, was the device of paying farmers for not raising any cotton. Another was to make them loans on cotton which they withheld from the market. As it turned out many of these "loans" became gifts, for there was a neat little provision that if the price of cotton did not go high enough to pay off the loan then the farmers did not need to repay it and the government kept the cotton. In that way the government gained possession of some six million bales of cotton.

With the recent increases in the price of cotton it became apparent that the government could sell off this surplus without a loss on the tremendous loans it had made. The AAA was about to sell, when Senator Smith, of South Carolina, obtained adoption of a provision forbidding the sale.

Thus the AAA can buy, but it cannot sell. It has bought and now Congress has frozen its purchases. Apparently there is no way in which the government can be reimbursed for the money it so liberally poured into the farmers' pockets during the dark days of the depression. To sell now, of course, would depress the price of cotton, and Congress does not intend to allow that. As one commentator remarks, it prefers to have the country foot the bill for a bit of economic horseplay "so unreasonable and so far-fetched" that if Congress had not done it, it would have been simply unbelievable.

It is a pretty kettle of fish. Indeed, Secretary Morgenthau has about hit it in describing it as "just wicked."

Shortages Are the Result Of a Lack of Foresight

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM today is plagued by many shortages, and not the least important is that of silk. The shortage of this commodity, essential in many lines of endeavor and especially parachutes, can be attributed to nothing less than a blunder on the part of authorities whose duty it was to anticipate what this country would need and take the necessary steps.

It was inevitable years ago when Japan began its aggression in the East that it would ultimately run afoul of American foreign policy. Japan knew it long ago. It could see the day when this country would clamp down on it. Cagily, it stocked up on scrap iron, foodstuffs, machine tools. And the manner in which it gobbled up American oil and gasoline has since become a public scandal.

Experts say that Japan now has enough oil to last for three years. In three years the Japanese can do a deal of expanding.

Japan is now all set for its expedition into empire. It may not succeed—in fact, there is evidence that it will prove a costly venture. But that does not explain satisfactorily Washington's lack of vision in not stocking up on silk. Now, when it is too late, the government finds the supply of silk cut off and nothing much to take its place.

Nor is silk the only commodity in which a shortage looms. There is also scarcity of tin, tungsten, rubber and many other important commodities. There is, for example, the much-publicized shortage of aluminum, which the cooperative housewives of the nation have so generously attempted to remedy. The nation should have had stocks of these materials to last for at least two years. Now citizens can only hope that everything will turn out well.

Just Another Sample Of Senseless Squader

PENDING in Congress is a bill (S. 1773) "to enable the United States Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Jefferson to carry out and give effect to certain approved plans."

These plans provide for the preparation of an edition of Jefferson's writings at a cost of $50,000; the publication of a memorial edition of these writings at $150,000; for memorial exercises to be held in Washington, at a cost of $15,000; the production of a motion picture of "the main events of Jefferson's life," at a cost of $10,000 and for 100,000 photographic copies of the best Jefferson portrait to be delivered in tubes for congressmen to mail out, at a cost of $5,000.

The total of these proposed appropriations is $230,000. Of course in these latter days of New Deal spendings that is scarcely more than a flyspeck, but in view of the heavy tax measure that is being formulated at Washington, this sum of nearly a quarter of a million dollars means much in that it represents what is at this time a piece of needless extravagance and is typical of numerous other similar spending proposals.

Certainly the need for economy is so obvious and so pressing that squandering like this is ridiculous. Congressmen and Washington can easily forego these costly tributes to a great American, inasmuch as there is nearing completion a magnificent memorial to him in the national capital for which the people will pay a large amount. A simple service at modest cost would suffice.

About the only thing to complete the folly of this proposal is a clause somewhere showing that it is necessary for the national defense.

Latin American Can Find Satisfaction

IF the Latin nations of South America are not satisfied with Uncle Sam's good neighbor policy, they ought to be. The United States is now absorbing completely the losses to South America incident to severance of its export outlets to Europe. United States imports from South America now exceed exports to that continent by $250,000,000 annually.

Always in the past this country has sold more to South America than it bought. But purchases during the first half of this year indicate that the United States in 1941 will take total Latin imports of more than a billion dollars, which is more than double the normal value of Latin America's trade with continental Europe. A great deal of this nation's increased trade with the Latins is for defense needs. But considerable of it is induced by the fact that the administration at Washington is emphasizing the good neighbor policy and taking Latin products of which the United States is not in imminent need. Some products and raw materials are purchased to keep them out of the clutches of the Axis, including Japan.

Incidentally, Latin America may wind up with considerable of the gold now reposing in United States storehouses. Excess of imports over exports is one way to reduce these holdings.

American Productive Genius Again Scores

PRESS REPORTS reveal the price effect of mass production in the output of 100 octane aviation gasoline. A few years ago this product was available in laboratories in minute quantities at $10 a gallon.

Processes for its production in quantity were gradually developed and the government is now placing contracts for 100 octane in lots of millions of gallons at fourteen cents a gallon. It can be bought outside the United States for less than sixteen cents a gallon. There are still limitations to output and increasing demand is causing the price to climb. But it is expected to level out at about sixteen cents, particularly as expansion is proposed that will allow production of more than 2,000,000 gallons daily. The government is pressing hard for speedy expansion.

Laboratories are now working on 150 octane gasoline. It, too, is available in minute quantities only at fantastic prices. But it is certain that the higher test aviation gasoline will soon be in mass production, giving American planes an efficiency in flight that can be matched by no other nation.

Thus is marked another score to the credit of American productive genius.

Price Control Effort Shows Need of Unity

PRICE CONTROL in the United States may be more practicable today than it was during Woodrow Wilson's administration in the last war. There may have been a change in the attitude of the American people.

Undoubtedly there were times when Woodrow Wilson, made wretched by runaway costs of living, wanted to saddle and bridle prices. But he did not. Nor did his chief counsel in such matters, Bernard Baruch, advise him to take such a course. They feared public sentiment.

Today Franklin D. Roosevelt plainly wants Congress to place in his hands such a curb on inflationary influences due to huge governmental expenditures. His chief counsel, Leon Henderson, is of similar mind. If Congress now goes along, it will be necessary to have cooperative agreement from the people.

This again suggests how essential national unity is in the prosecution of the big defense program. Official Washington would do well to give heed to the great force of public opinion.

Junior just can't understand why we don't make a present of Iceland to Hitler. He's just read that it is the place from which the United States imports most of its cod liver oil.

A minor league manager is a dentist during the off season. He is just the fellow to lead the New York Yanks.

Praise Is Good Coin

By MARSHALL MASLIN

One who rarely praises me, praised something I did.

Said it was good. I modestly protested that it was an accident. Said I'd probably stolen it from someone else. Gazed from ear to ear, but was made profoundly happy by that rare praise.

I didn't really believe the praise was justified, but I wanted to believe it was. I hoped it was and it was good to know that someone, once at least, thought well of me. A gay little flame began to burn within me. A fire that warmed me in winter and had the miraculous power of cooling me on the hottest day. A flame started by a bit of praise, sweeter than hushion fruit. More welcome than a cool breeze in the desert. Something I'd done little to deserve but that was dearer to me than diamonds.

I had not fished for it, baited my hook to attain it, but it rose like a lovely mermaid from a green-white wave of life and smiled enchantingly upon me. A bit of praise. A compliment.

It cost that other person little, but it was riches to me. How silly, how sweet! . . . And what a rare coin a compliment is! A coin that never loses its value, never depreciates, but is always a fair exchange. . . . And then I took the gold of that compliment, in a generous and friendly mood, and made many other coins of it and looked around at people and found none who would refuse my Coin of Praise. I discovered it was easy to praise—if I FELT like praising. If I was happy I could find an excuse anywhere for putting praise into circulation among human beings, and seeing them smile and seeing them flush happily and see them delighted by a bit of praise that was as tiny but as enduringly active as a speck of radium.

I'm telling you that in all the world there's no greater coin than praise. And it may be minted legally and without risk in any human heart.

Draft Vote Halts A War Declaration, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Undeniable signs that the British are pressing Mr. Roosevelt for some further belligerent action have been evident here for more than a week. The rumor circulated by congressmen that Lord Beaverbrook had threatened Britain would make peace with the Nazis unless the United States came into the war within thirty days has been convincingly squelched. Mr. Hull called it a patent absurdity, and it is Britain in a better position today than at any time since the Nazis invaded France. She has supremacy in the air at home, making her reasonably secure against invasion; she is on top in the Battle of the Atlantic. There is no reason for her to think of a peace that could only be a Nazi victory.

Paul Mallon

Yet it is clear certain top British statesmen have feared the end was near for Russia. A Nazi victory in the next two weeks would embarrass the British war-business all-around the world, in Turkey, Vichy, and Thailand. The shock of a Red defeat, after all the communiques that have come out of Moscow, might have a darkening effect upon anti-Nazi world morale. This, the British frankly believe, could be offset by American action. No troops need be sent abroad, a mere declaration would be enough.

But the plain unmistakable fact is the draft extension bill (vitality necessary for home defense alone) passed the House by the embarrassing margin of one slim vote; the proposal to declare a full national emergency was softened considerably in the bill; the idea of withdrawing the restriction against sending American troops out of the hemisphere cannot be gotten out of a congressional committee ice box even for serious consideration.

In the light of this situation, much more moderate moral assistance than the British would like, may be expected.

Japan Worries Little
The diplomatic war of nerves with Japan has not caused officialdom here to lose much sleep. Some expansion of Japanese forces on the Soviet order was interpreted only as a preparation for the possibility that the Nazis might crush completely the Stalin government, or that Moscow might withdraw enough of her Far Eastern army, to let the Japs walk in without a fight. (The Reds have moved some men and equipment west, but no one knows how much.) Similarly, the Japs have been playing to get into Thailand without a struggle. They are trying to force the Siamese to invite them, in the typical Nazi style. If the signals from Tokyo have been read accurately here, the Japs want everything except a fight.

Hull Acting President
State Secretary Hull, ragged by the goosers who said he was out when he was on his vacation, has in reality been acting president during P. D. R.'s absence. Cabinet members Knox and Stimson and Presidential Press Secretary Stephen Early have been working up to him. His prime cabinet position entitles him to that rank.

Incidentally much of the mystery-publicity about the disappearances of leading war, navy and defense officials has really been sponsored officially to cover brief hideouts on vacation. It is unwise diplomacy these days to let foreign adversaries know when your leading officials are going to be off the job for a day or two. These few stolen days are about all the vacation officials of this government expect to get for a long time.

Like Mother Hubbard
Hitler may know how Mother Hubbard felt, when he starts to refill his larder in the fertile Ukraine. His reports placed him on the west bank of the Dnieper August 13, but the vast unbroken wheat growing fields are east of the Dnieper. The crop is generally harvested before August 15, and the Reds claimed they hurried the harvest this year. All the grain throughout the area has been dead ripe for thirty days, and if the Russians did not burn it, Stalin's burnt earth decree was disobeyed.

Staple food of Russia, however, is the black bread made from rye, and the rye fields are in the north and still green.

In the first place, they have military map-specialists and mountains of statistical information with an organized system for sifting and drawing conclusions.

In addition, quite recently, some unquestionable information has been coming through from brother officers abroad in our own or other services. Piecing it all together, the result for whatever it is worth, is something like this:

Soldiers in Saddle
The recent rumor that Goering is in the dog-house is entirely unfounded as is the explanation that he and the generals, von Keitel and the rest, opposed the great Russian adventure or that the latter has bogged down.

The truth, according to these reports is that if anybody is in the dog-house, it is Hitler himself.

The small but powerful group of Nazi politicians wanted to posture and gesture around in the West. The professional soldiers insisted that Germany could not risk further westward action leaving the powerful Russian army on its flank and rear. They also argued that 1941 was the last chance to attend to it. Every strategic consideration required the destruction or practical paralysis of that great force before making another move.

The professional view was adopted. Hitler is confining himself to political affairs and has little to do with the campaign. The soldiers are in the saddle. That certainly sounds reasonable.

First Plan Slowed
The next important assertion is that while what was called Plan A—a three to six weeks decisive campaign—has been slowed up, Plan A was merely a tentative gamble, not greatly relied upon by the general staff.

If it worked by some spectacular break-through such as that in France through the forest of Ardennes, so much the better, but the possibility of its not working was never forgotten and plan and schedule B were not to be interfered with if Plan A—a swift stablitz—didn't perform a miracle.

Plan and schedule B were a systematic chewing into Red-mince meat of the whole Russian army—corps by corps and group by group. This required much more time. You can't kill 2,000,000 men in a day—even in a slaughter pen. The Russians are expert at demolition—destruction of roads and bridges. Plan B required the bringing up and supply of masses of German heavy infantry. This in turn depended upon the speed and efficiency of the great German specialized road-building corps.

In the meantime, by grand scale encircling movements, such as now going on around Odessa, and dozens of smaller pincer attacks, all the way from the White to the Bal-

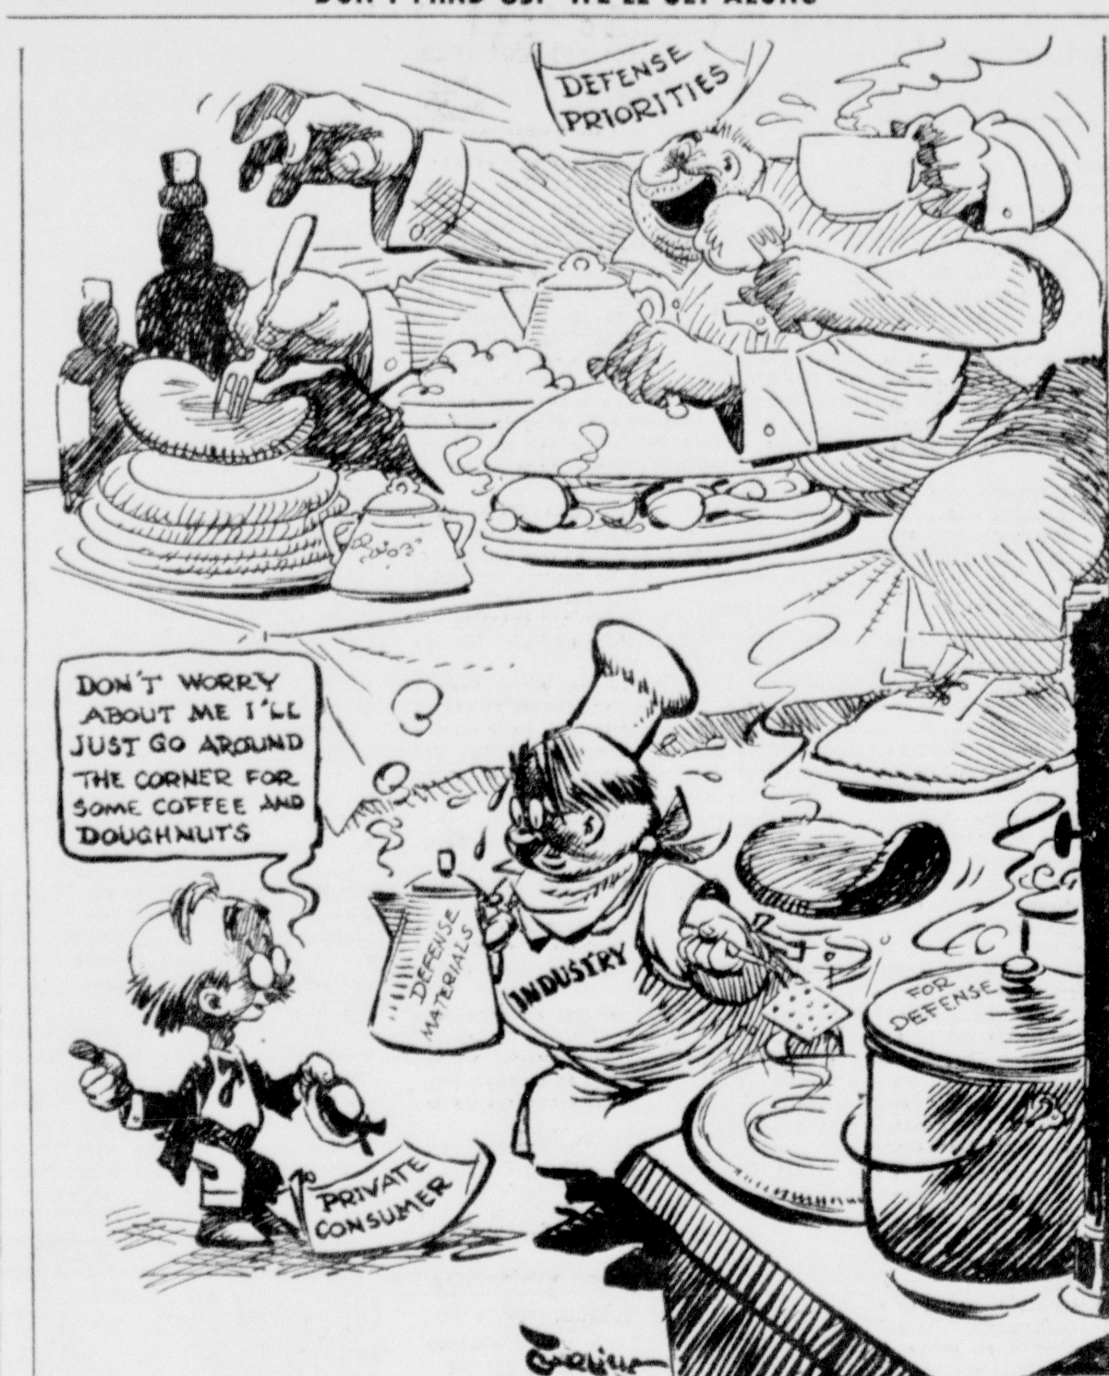

Men are tattooed with their special beliefs like so many South Sea Islanders; but a real human heart with divine love in it beats with the same glow under all the patterns of all earth's thousands tribes.—OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

A record reduction of $1,234,000,000 in the supplemental National Defense bill was unanimously recommended by the Senate Appropriations committee under leadership of Senator Alva B. Adams, of Colorado. He declared the money unneeded because it was to provide ordnance for an army of more than 3,000,000 men. The $8,063,000,000 bill had been passed by the House.

There is every indication that the bitter old feud between New Dealers and business men is on again. When President Roosevelt needed the aid of industry to get the defense program in motion, he showed a tendency to let up on the business interests. In fact, he appeared to be heading toward conservatism. Many of the braintrusts disappeared from his favored circle and O. P. Mers came upon the scene.

But the New Dealers seem to be returning to the scene. Harry Hopkins is about to come back from Moscow and London. Vice President Wallace, handicapped by FDR, is now an executive vice president. Knudsen and men who have contributed so much to American industry and production are being discredited. Repeated and violent reactions are resulting. The mistrust between businessmen and New Dealers which has been present since 1933 can hardly make for unity.

Experts Believe Secondary Slaughter Plan Is Being Followed by the Nazis

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

CHICAGO, August 14.—The substance and accuracy of the following column can't be guaranteed.

Most of it seems reasonable and in accord with such facts as are known, although I can hardly credit some of it. The only thing I can say with confidence is that it is a fair consensus of our active professional military experts in Washington.

Much of it they don't know and have to guess. But they have more to guess on than we newspaper kibitzers.

In the first place, they have military map-specialists and mountains of statistical information with an organized system for sifting and drawing conclusions.

The recent rumor that Goering is in the dog-house is entirely unfounded as is the explanation that he and the generals, von Keitel and the rest, opposed the great Russian adventure or that the latter has bogged down.

The truth, according to these reports is that if anybody is in the dog-house, it is Hitler himself.

The small but powerful group of Nazi politicians wanted to posture and gesture around in the West. The professional soldiers insisted that Germany could not risk further westward action leaving the powerful Russian army on its flank and rear. They also argued that 1941 was the last chance to attend to it. Every strategic consideration required the destruction or practical paralysis of that great force before making another move.

The professional view was adopted. Hitler is confining himself to political affairs and has little to do with the campaign. The soldiers are in the saddle. That certainly sounds reasonable.

First Plan Slowed
The next important assertion is that while what was called Plan A—a three to six weeks decisive campaign—has been slowed up, Plan A was merely a tentative gamble, not greatly relied upon by the general staff.

If it worked by some spectacular break-through such as that in France through the forest of Ardennes, so much the better, but the possibility of its not working was never forgotten and plan and schedule B were not to be interfered with if Plan A—a swift stablitz—didn't perform a miracle.

Plan and schedule B were a systematic chewing into Red-mince meat of the whole Russian army—corps by corps and group by group. This required much more time. You can't kill 2,000,000 men in a day—even in a slaughter pen. The Russians are expert at demolition—destruction of roads and bridges. Plan B required the bringing up and supply of masses of German heavy infantry. This in turn depended upon the speed and efficiency of the great German specialized road-building corps.

In the meantime, by grand scale encircling movements, such as now going on around Odessa, and dozens of smaller pincer attacks, all the way from the White to the Baltic seas, Plan B is one of wholesale slaughter and destruction the like of which the world has never dreamed.

Ahead of Schedule
Plan B is said to be ahead of schedule and it is beginning to be clear that the communiques of the German high command are more accurate and timely than those of Russia.

With all this and with less circumstance of verity and more conjecture is a question of tottering control of the highly powerful political minorities—the Nazi party in Germany, the Communists in Russia—and of the ascendancy of military commanders.

The German plan for Russia is said not to be, as it was in Poland, reorganization of a whole people and country for complete digestion.

Rather it is first to liquidate the Communist party and then to seize certain mining, agricultural, petroleum and industrial areas and let the havoc of defeat, destruction and disorganization take its course elsewhere on Russian political fronts.

Well there it is. As I began by saying, I can't vouch for it but it certainly opens up some interesting vistas for imagination. If it is true it might bring in sight an earlier end of war.

We don't like pork barrels any better than the President likes them and his veto of the defense road bill was eminently justified. But even before the House of Representatives had got around to upholding the president's veto of the road bill, Mr. Roosevelt had demonstrated that he is not opposed to all pork barrels—and that he isn't opposed to them at all when they include one or more of his pet projects. How the president furnished that demonstration is neatly and briefly summarized by the New York Times as follows:

"Seven years ago President Roosevelt submitted the St. Lawrence River sea-way-and-power project to the Senate in the form of a treaty that required a two-thirds vote of approval to make it effective. The Senate failed to approve it."

In March of this year the president revised the St. Lawrence plan and presented it to Congress, this time in the form of an "agreement"—already signed—which would not require a two-thirds vote of approval but merely a majority vote in order to provide the necessary money. Congress has not appropriated the money.

This week the president gave his approval to a new strategy which would simply include the whole St. Lawrence project as one item in the annual (and highly popular) rivers-and-harbors "pork" bill.

"At any moment now Congress is likely to catch on to the idea that the President favors the St. Lawrence project."

The State department hopes it's right in its guess that Adolf's agents' activities south of the Rio Grande have been so obvious that they've reacted against him.

Anyway, almost every day brings some fresh account of their suppression in one southern capital or another.

It also is surmised that the help the Axis has enlisted from Caudillo Franco of Spain, has backfired against Adolf in the southern part of the new world. Franco's totalitarianism, like Adolf and Benito Mussolini, they evidently conjectured that as a Spaniard, he'd speak pretty convincingly to Spanish western hemisphericals. His story is that Uncle Samuel's chief adviser relative to his Latin-American relationships is General Jose Mija, and he doesn't believe that Latin American will like that.

No? The State department isn't so sure. In reality, the department probably hasn't had much advice from the general, but if it has, why should Latin Americans resent it?

General Mija's as much a Spaniard as Caudillo Franco is.

For several years, until two or three years ago, Spain was a republic. Francisco Franco led a rebellion against the republicans, seeking to set up totalitarian rule, similar to Herr Hitler's and Signor Mussolini's. General Mija led the republican forces.

Are Republics
Now, the Latin Americas are republics. Why wouldn't they have sympathized with General Mija's rather than with the Francos?

Backed by Germany's Nazis and Italy's Fascists, Franco won. In came his Falangist regime in Spain. Unmistakably there are totalitarian agents in Latin America, or the governments there wouldn't be kept so busy suppressing 'em. But they can't be predominant, or they couldn't BE suppressed.

The State department draws the conclusion that General Mija, probably is as good a republican (or democratic) missionary south of the Rio Grande as Caudillo Franco is for totalitarianism, and a lot better, most likely.

Uncle Sam's hustling up his Pan-American co-ordination program by urgent invitations to army and navy officers from our southern neighbors' countries to visit us as guests, to study our western hemisphere defensive systems, ashore and afloat. And they're coming, in increasing numbers.

German-Trained Armies
We need to send more down there. That's a game at which the Germans beat us to it long ago. Those southern armies have been largely German-trained for a couple of generations or more. It doesn't necessarily make 'em pro-German, but perhaps it has had a certain effect on their psychology. They goose-step and all that.

Our naval officers, though, made 'emelves pretty solid in Brazil in Cal Coolidge's day. That's something we owe to Cal. He sent a navy mission to Rio to build a fleet and educate its personnel, and it did a first-rate job. Brazil had a dreadnaught ahead of any other country except Britain and the United States.

One thing we need to do is to learn Spanish—AND Portuguese.

When a Yankee's acquired Spanish he thinks he's got the whole thing. He hasn't. The Brazilians say they can't understand it. Personally I don't think there's much difference, but the Spanish and Portuguese do. Each contend that the other's a mere dialect, and his diplomatic to know 'em both.

Factographs
In the Okfenokee swampland in Georgia, may be seen from boats Florida cranes, American egrets, herons, wild turkeys, alligators, turtles and occasionally bears. Large colonies of white ibises also nest there in summer.

Because biter was imported from France, Austria and Czechoslovakia, England now is faced with a shortage of pipes.

Work of Hitler
In Pan-America
Backfiring Now

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

That Herr Hitler wants pro-Nazi governments in Latin America for his benefit if and after he wins his present war isn't doubted a bit by the State department. However, Yankee diplomacy and army and navy observers here, too, are strongly of the opinion that he's anxious for an epidemic of uprisings and revolutions right now, in order to worry Uncle Sam so much that his attention will be distracted from aiding Britain and embattled democracy generally.

In parenthesis and rather humorously, Comrade Stalin's press is including Russia in the democratic class at present. Until Germany attacked the Soviets, their Washington embassy made no particular effort for favorable American publicity, realizing that it couldn't succeed. Now, though, it's trying out news releases by the ream. Running all through them is the note of emphasis upon the democratic nature claimed by them as characteristic of the Kremlin regime. They get considerably into print, too. The wastebasket of all they'd have gone into a few weeks ago.

Hopeful Guess
The State department hopes it's right in its guess that Adolf's agents' activities south of the Rio Grande have been so obvious that they've reacted against him.

Castle of Contentment

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

"WHEN I've finished Mr. Alkire's house," Ylena promised, when Tate asked, "When do we get married?"

Tate groaned, "That will take ages."

"Just about long enough," the girl told him, "to make sure you mean what you are saying." She kissed him again to make her remark less severe.

"You will take the ring, won't you, Ylena?" He had it ready in his hand.

"Yes, I'll take the ring."

He slipped the marquise diamond on her finger. "Well, that's something," he said in a not totally pleased voice.

As days went into weeks, Ylena realized she worked hard, not only to please Tate, but also because she enjoyed it. She liked the jumbled, slightly messy richness of her shop, the actual decorating itself, the mysterious crates that arrived and were unpacked after hours in her back room. She even liked the stragglers who wandered in, picked things up, put them down again, and often picked them up again to buy. She was so accustomed to going on with her work while they pried, that she would never have noticed Francis if that dark girl hadn't spoken deliberately.

Ylena looked up from her desk where she was fitting Terrence Alkire's picture into the plain gingham frame. Still holding the work in her hands, she walked toward the front, hoping to ease her unwelcome guest toward the front door.

Braving cold aloofness, Francis said, "I've been wanting to talk to you since—since that night in Tate's office, feel I owe you some explanation."

"No, you don't," the blond girl rushed to say. She felt her jealousy returning into sickening waves.

"Please!" Francis insisted. "I know Tate really loves you or I wouldn't believe. He told me so that night, but I didn't believe him. Then when he continued to tell me and wouldn't pay any attention to me I realized it was true. I'll admit I was crazy about him—I still am, and I would take him away from you if it were possible. But it isn't I come to tell you that." She smiled widely, showing perfect teeth.

"You can see I am very honest. I hope you will believe me."

At that moment the telephone rang. Having the sketch of Alkire and a frame atop a stack of boxes, Ylena ran back to her desk. It was Tish calling from the Northern Ranch, a chortling, hilarious Tish who, after having her food wait, suddenly wanted to go about her house. At rambling length, she planned, gave long accounts of events at the ranch, put Tate on for several minutes, then talked herself again, until Ylena's hand ached from holding the receiver. One blessing—perhaps Francis would take a hint and leave.

But when Ylena emerged from her little alcove office several minutes later, Francis still was there. Impatiently the blond girl walked toward her and reached for the likeness of Alkire and its accompanying frame. "Really, I'm very busy—" Her voice tapered into nothing. "This is not my drawing," she said, puzzled, then snapped her eyes wide open to look into Francis' almost black ones. "You did this?"

"I hope you don't mind. I found paper and did it to pass time." She gave a faint smile, uncertain of how it would be received. "He's such a dear old character, isn't he?"

Ylena nodded. She looked again at the rough sketch. "You're quite good. Where did you study?"

"Study?" the girl scoffed with a grimace. "You don't study in a family of 11 children. You do well to eat."

"A natural talent, then. Can you sew?" Ylena asked abruptly.

Francis fixed an almost startled look upon her questioner. "Why, yes."

"How would you like to work here?" Ylena rushed to get the words said before she could change her mind. Really, she must be a complete fool to ask this girl into her shop.

For a mere instant the dark, swarthy-skinned girl did not speak. Then she said quietly, "I'd like it very much."

Again the telephone's strident peals split the air. "You might begin with answering that," Ylena directed. Francis did, in a very businesslike voice. The wire went dead. Immediately the call was repeated. Francis answered a second time and received no response. When the third call came, Ylena answered.

Tate protested, "I've had the devil's own time getting you. This is the third call. Some wrong number kept answering."

"You didn't have the wrong number. That was my new assistant."

"Assistant?" he repeated in complete bafflement. "Here I've been hoping you'd go broke and marry me any minute and instead, you get an assistant. Who is it? Anyone I know?"

"Yes, you know her well. Her name is Francis."

Francis whooped with malicious pleasure when Tate came into her bedroom before dinner and told her about his sweetheart's new helper. "Doesn't that make things a trifle complicated?" She was trying to put lipstick on her mouth, a feat impossible because she kept breaking into fits of renewed laughter.

Tate said stiffly, "It does not complicate things. I'm through with Francis and Francis knows it."

"Then why are you raving so?" "I simply want advice. I thought you, being a convincing female yourself, might have some idea of what she's up to."

Percy walked in, bent to kiss his wife and said, "What who is up to?"

"Ylena." Quickly Diane told him what had happened. Percy responded with a wide grin. "Maybe she isn't up to anything," the girl said. "She seemed a sweet harmless soul the day of the shop opening."

Percy vetoed that. "Sweet harmless soul. She's about as sweet and harmless as a spitting rattlesnake."

He lay down beside Tate on his wife's satin-covered bed. "You should see her in action. The woman is a demon. She sneaked the rental price on the shop, then made such fun of those Mexican shacks that I spilled the figure. To say nothing of bawling me out constantly while we were together. I don't like her, but I have to admire her. She'll make money on Alkire, and apparently the shop is paying, if she has to have a helper—" Control deserted him. Diane joined in his merriment.

In a biting voice Tate said, "Don't sit giggling like numbnuts. Help me figure out the dame. After all, I'm going to marry her and I don't even understand her."

Diane turned on her dressing table bench to stare at Tate. "So she finally got you?"

"Got ME! Listen, sister dear, I finally got her, and it was no snap."

The woman turned back to the mirror and began setting her makeup with astringent-dampened cotton. "Does Pop know?"

"Yes, and he's glad."

Percy queried, "What about your mother?"

"I'll get around her," Tate said. "I always have."

Diane said to her husband, "It's the old apple-of-the-eye stuff. Tate has worked it on Mom since cradle days."

At the dinner table Diane said to her father, "Isn't it wonderful the success Ylena Varanoff is making?" She already has an assistant."

She cast a mischievous glance toward Tate.

"That's fine!" the senior Cromwell praised. "She's a smart girl. A mighty smart girl. You know, this is to be able to work out a mutually advantageous business before long."

"I don't want my wife working," Tate said sullenly.

"That's fine!" the senior Cromwell praised. "She's a smart girl. A mighty smart girl. You know, this is to be able to work out a mutually advantageous business before long."

His father shrugged. "Suit yourself, but I'd think over the advantages first. She's barely started in comparison to what she is going to make as this town grows."

"Maybe you're right, Pop," Tate's eyes narrowed in a speculative calculation. Then he looked at his mother.

Her mouth was working tremulously. Did you say wife?"

"All right now, Mom, do you want me to be happy or don't you?"

"Of course, dear, but you've been happy before and you've never been married." Automatically she refilled her husband's coffee cup. Her eyes were tear-flooded and reproachful.

"Take it easy, Mom. I'm 25, I weigh a hundred and sixty-seven. I've been working since high school days and most people think I'm fairly intelligent. So, for heavens sake, why can't you realize I'm out of my jumper swing?"

Her voice wavered. "I want you to marry a sweet young girl."

Viciously, Tate said, "Ylena is a sweet young girl. Just because she's had a bad deal—but why waste my breath? You may as well get accustomed to the idea, Mom, because no one is going to keep me from marrying Ylena Varanoff."

Reveals "Squeeze Play" Planned To Oust Axis-Dominated Airlines From Latin-American Routes

By CORNELIUS V. WHITNEY

Mr. Whitney, who wrote this story exclusively for Central Press, is chairman of the board of Pan-American Airways, principal competitor in South America of Axis-owned airlines.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14—Step by step the Latin-American republics, with the help of the United States, are moving inexorably toward the time when Axis-owned or dominated airlines will be "squeezed out" of South America.

With the disappearance of these airlines from the trade routes over the southern continent, Berlin and Rome will lose a vital foothold in the Americas as well as the No. 1 Nazi-Fascist artery for the dissemination of propaganda and anti-democratic activities in the western hemisphere.

Only a few weeks ago one of the final steps in this program was taken to rid all the South American west coast of European-dominated airlines and substitute for them services of local or United States air transport. The government of Bolivia expropriated on May 16 the German air line, Lloyd Aero Boliviano, which has been operating under an exclusive franchise in that country.

Transfer of the German company's bases and routes to American control is a development of particular significance, since it separates German and Italian airlines still operating on the east coast from "sympathetic" air connections with the west where Peru and Ecuador recently set a precedent for Bolivia by taking over German lines in their countries.

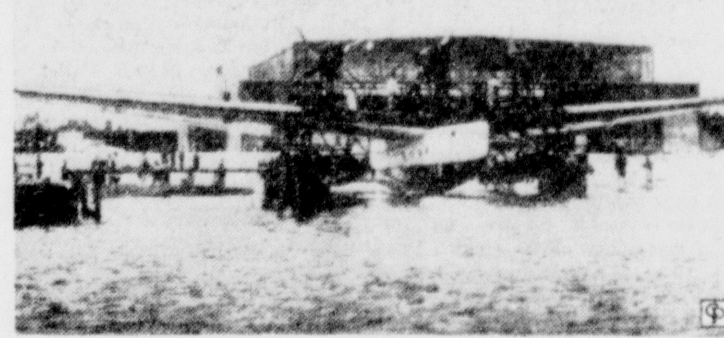

Move Against Axis

A long-range program of increased competition and financial pressure against the Nazi and Fascist airlines still operating in the Americas is moving swiftly into action with the United States government playing the role of "spark plug" in the plan.

Although this program already has met with important successes in Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, there are still six airlines dominated by Berlin and Rome interests flying without hindrance over strategic routes of South America. The ground and air crews of these planes are well known as spreaders of the Nazi gospel in our neighboring republics over routes that last year totaled 3,700,000 flying miles.

A modern German Junkers bi-motored transport plane.

The Rohrbach Romar, largest sister ship of the Rostra type of flying boat that makes regular commercial transatlantic flights between Europe and South America.

The Italians now operate over the transatlantic route which the French were forced to abandon. This line (LATI) links Rome and Berlin directly with the great capitals of eastern South America. LATI makes the South Atlantic jump from Dakar, Africa, to the Brazilian coast at Pernambuco.

From this point of the South American continent the big German Lufthansa company line, Syndicato Condor, and the other five Axis lines compete directly with America's air services along nearly 20,000 miles of trade routes.

Members of the civil aeronautics board recently pointed out that the Axis network of airlines in South America is "not a commercial enterprise," but rather a "well-considered instrument of a national policy bent upon the cultural and political domination of the South American continent."

A major plank in the inter-American program of increased competition against the German-Italian lines is a new airlines credit agency which has just been formed in Washington to finance new lines and the purchase of United States aviation equipment for South America.

This credit corporation will have the power to lend money to private companies in both the United States and South America and to the governments of the other American republics to help build up existing lines and start new ones. President Roosevelt already has allocated an initial $8,000,000 to this agency from his emergency defense fund and an additional $42,000,000 will be made available for aggregate capitalization of the new group.

Above all, the corporation will compete with Axis airlines in South America by offering better credit and delivery terms on all kinds of equipment and airframe goods.

Emergency Near, Fitzgibbons Tells American Legion

Treasury Department Official Addresses Baltimore Convention

BALTIMORE, Aug. 14 (AP)—William C. Fitzgibbons, treasury department official, today told delegates to the twenty-third annual convention of the American Legion of Maryland that the United States is faced with an emergency that is so far away as some people would have us believe.

"We need people who know what an emergency really is—people who like you, have done their bit before and are willing to sacrifice again so that our liberties can be preserved," he declared.

George D. Harman, state department commander, opened the session which heard committee reports on Americanism, auditing, treasury, child welfare, grave registration, rules and credentials.

Isaac S. George, executive secretary of the Maryland Council of Defense, spoke briefly.

Asks Aid for Navy

Legion co-operation for recruiting services was asked by Commander Philip Hambach, head of Baltimore's navy recruiting station. Hambach said the navy is faced with a "tremendous problem in getting manpower and urged Legionnaires to 'talk navy' to help recruit men for naval units now building.

"We need 360,000 men within the next two years," he declared.

Handker-sliding and a football game held up the start of the business session for a time. Later in the day, as more delegates and visitors poured in, the noise-makers took over and extended their fun-making area to include downtown business streets.

Contest for Commander

A three-way contest for Harman's successor assumed greater proportions as Saturday's election approached.

In the field are Roy S. Pyle, past department vice-commander and a member of the Joseph L. Davis Post, Harry De Grace, T. Frank Lynch of Hagerstown, also a past department commander and a member of the Morris-Frock Post, and Robert McCollough, Hyattsville, a member of the Snyder-farmer post.

O'Connor Raps Isolationists

Governor O'Connor told the legionnaires that isolationist policies threaten American democracy and urged that "because we want to continue to live in peace, we must be prepared to defend to the fullest our free institutions and economic advantages."

Addressing the banquet, the governor lauded the Legion's expressed readiness to give aid in any emergency "because the Legion not only represents the best in American life but has the benefit of actual experience in defending the honor and integrity of this country."

Pleading for a national unity. O'Connor referred to today's disclosure of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting at sea and labeled it "a nation call for every true legionnaire, every true American, to stand foursquare behind these two leaders of world democracy, for a lasting world plan."

"The isolationists-at-any-price will tell you that anyone who is not with them is a jingoist, a war monger. They bury their heads in the sand and refuse to read the lesson that recent history in Europe and the far east has made plain for anyone to read and understand."

Appeals to Loyalty

"This is a time when all loyal Americans, instead of resisting the efforts being initiated in Washington to bolster our defenses, must line up solidly behind our duly elected officials and must put our shoulder to the wheel of defense wholeheartedly."

If the people of France had done that instead of permitting small-minded and self-seeking politicians to confuse them, we wouldn't have the sad spectacle of a once-proud nation being led around by the time while innocent French women and children face a future of starvation and virtual slavery."

General Hershey's memorandum to State Directors stated:

"No classification of a registrant is permanent and any time prior to induction the case of a registrant may be reopened and his classification considered anew. (Amendment No. 60, Paragraph No. 385 A, Selective Service Regulations.)"

"When the case of a registrant is reopened and his classification considered anew, the determination of the Local Board upon such consideration shall have the effect of a new and original classification even though the registrant is again placed in the class that he was in before the case was reopened. (Amendment No. 60, Paragraph B, Selective Service Regulations.)"

"Under these provisions there is no distinction in purpose and effect between the consideration of the original classification of a registrant and the subsequent reopening and consideration of his classification."

While General Hershey's memorandum was issued primarily to correct a misinterpretation by some local boards of the phrase, "at the time the registrant is classified" as used in the Regulations (paragraph 355 c) in connection with claims for deferment because of dependents, Colonel Stanwood pointed out that it also applies to all cases involving reclassification. He said:

"Local Boards should bear in mind that when classifications of registrants who were deferred because they were contributing to the national health, safety and interest—in industrial, agricultural, or professional activities—are reconsidered they must again be given notice of classification and accorded the same right to appeal before induction as when they were classified originally."

While any registrant who is reclassified may appeal within 10 days after mailing of his notice of classification, Col. Stanwood said, he urged that those who have occupational deferments, or their employers, anticipate such action if they desire extension of deferment.

"Any registrant whose period of deferment for an occupational reason is expiring, or his employer, should formally request his Local Board for an extension well in advance of its expiration," he said. "This will not only facilitate action in his case, but also will help to prevent interference with the National Defense program."

Shipyards

which the company said gave its employees an average of $50.07 a week. The management refused to negotiate on the grounds that the labor board had not designated a bargaining agent.

The dispute was referred to the Mediation Board Wednesday, and yesterday's back-to-work vote followed advice from union representatives, who had conferred with board officials, that the strikers were "not gaining anything by staying out now."

Still hanging over the nation were threats of crippling strikes in the telephone and aluminum industries, and for the second day about 1,000 AFL carpenters, electricians and laborers remained away from work on two naval construction projects in the Pensacola, Fla., area.

Aluminum Strike Threatened

Without setting a date for a walkout, the CIO Aluminum workers union threatened a strike of 20,000 workers in five plants of the Aluminum Company of America unless the government intervened in its dispute with the company over north-south wage differentials.

The union, asking elimination of the differentials, said workers at Badin, N. C., and Alcoa, Tenn., received a minimum of 55 cents an hour; those at New Kensington, Pa., 73 cents; and those at Detroit, Mich., and Edgewater, N. J., 75 cents.

The threat of a telephone tie-up arose from a dispute between the Association of Equipment Workers, affiliate of the Independent National Federation of Telephone Workers, and Western Electric Company.

The association, unsuccessful in negotiations for a contract including automatic wage increases, a maintenance of union clause and other concessions, said a strike against Western Electric had been authorized by locals in thirteen cities.

Strike Might Spread

In event of a strike, union officials said, other employees might decline to cross picket lines and thus might tie up the entire Bell system.

The work stoppage by some AFL men at the Pensacola naval air station and at Ellyson Field, nearby naval land plane training base, was described by the navy as "in effect a strike against the United States government." Union officials contended, however, that the men were not on strike but merely taking a holiday. About 1,000 of 5,000 workers were said to have joined in the holiday.

The carpenters ask an increase from $1 an hour to $1.25; electricians from $1.25 to $1.50; and laborers from 40 cents to 50 cents.

war should break in the South Pacific.

Japanese sources themselves said that these were possibilities, although "not necessarily probabilities" and conceded that Japanese maneuvers for expansion in southern Asia had slowed down even while the Churchill—Roosevelt meeting was no more than a persistent world-wide rumor.

Ban Exports to Japan

A few hours after the declaration was announced the board of trade published an order effective tomorrow forbidding all exports to Japan except under license, and revoking all outstanding licenses.

That Dakar in French West Africa and French North Africa were more than mentioned was accepted here in some quarters, for it was stated that Churchill long concerned over possible German moves in those directions, would have been likely to emphasize his anxiety.

The eight points were generally seen as similar in many ways to Woodrow Wilson's celebrated fourteen of the last great war.

But as to point eight—that for disarmament—British authorities stressed that it was harder and more "real" than the "Wilsonian approach."

"The gangsters are going to be disarmed—that's the golden rule of the show," they elaborated.

THE DAILY STORY RENEGADES

Proving That Modern Warfare Doesn't Have a Corner on Boldness—or Surprises Either

By JOSEPH BARTON

"If Charleston fails, it will be another heavy blow to Gen. Washington. Already the Port of Boston has been in a state of siege for long months. And now the British Armada is lined up around the roadstead of Charleston Harbor like vultures awaiting to strike!"

Lt. John Goodbody, recently of the Massachusetts 6th Light Infantry, glanced over the sweltering dunes of Sullivan's Island toward the sea.

Port Sullivan, where Col. Moultrie and picked companies from South Carolina and Georgia and Virginia desperately strove to build fresh breastworks against time. The seaward horizon showed nearly 60 enemy ships, including three heavy ships of the line.

"If Sir Henry Clinton attacks today, it will mean the certain fall of the port," M. Gerondeau declared flatly.

M. Gerondeau spoke with authority. Now a trader in arms and ammunition, he had lately served on the staff of the Marquis de la Fayette. Well he knew the ragtag and bobtail soldiery of the Continental Army! And raiding parties from the Armada had for three days been sacking the town itself.

"Col. Moultrie will not be to blame," Goodbody judged evenly. "Even with plenty of slave labor, and with captains and majors and colonels digging along with black slaves, only a miracle could get the fort completed in time. The whole west side is open to a counterattack from a landing force!"

M. Gerondeau grunted. "That is your affair, monsieur. The colonel has sent you and your 2d North Carolina Rifles to the north end of the island to engage any landing parties. Over the shoal is the only logical place of attack!"

The lieutenant frowned. "I have two light six-pounders, but no ammunition! And my two chief gunners, Arnold Pegram and Shamus O'Neill, have turned renegade. They stole off last night with our scout, Chief Eagle Claw of the Niagara tribe. We can do nothing."

"There is a magazine at the fort. A party of riflemen could portage enough across the dunes to serve your guns," the trader pointed out soberly. "I, myself, sold a shipment of shot and powder to the town council but a month ago for the fort."

"And what happened to it?" Lt. Goodbody spat disgustedly. "All but 10 thousand pounds of it went up to Boston or was stolen by the Indians. Probably the stolen part is lying out there this minute in British magazines waiting to be used against us!" Again the lieutenant cursed the renegades roundly. "I know nothing about cannons. Rifles must serve!"

Through the sweltering morning the outpost of riflemen, bare to the waist and fighting chiggers and mosquitoes incessantly, fidgeted while they watched the fleet calmly preparing to attack. A bomb ketch moved out from the lee of a frigate and sailed on a port tack directly down toward the sand shoal opposite. Slacking sail, her two stern howitzers puffed white smoke suddenly.

Plying palmetto timbers spouted from the half-completed bastions of Fort Sullivan as the bombshells exploded. A half-hearted cannonade, mixed with rifle fire, answered from the fort's walls. There was a thunderous boom from one of the frigates then, and a broadside of cannonist whistled into the fort. Paint shouts and cries came to the outpost from the distant fort. It was murderous.

"Col. Moultrie cannot waste a round of shot!" Goodbody declared disgustedly. "And here comes the landing party! It will be bayonets against English powder this time!" True enough, out from the middle frigate surged a dozen longboats, filled to the gunwales with red-coated British marines. They made directly for the spit of sand protected by the bomb ketch.

One by one the longboats grounded on the bar and the marines leaped overboard to begin wading toward the northerly end of Sullivan's island. Goodbody assembled his riflemen and advanced to the protection of the dunes on the beach. He held his fire. There was nothing to do but wait in patience until the redcoats were within sure range.

"The whole west side is open."

Onward came the grim-visaged marines, their uneasy eyes piercing through the crabgrass of the dunes for hostile signs. The water crept upward toward the men's chins as the bar shelved off into deeper water toward the shore. Lt. Goodbody waited.

"Fire when the last man steps ashore. Look their carouche boxes are filled with cartridges! If only their six-pounders were serviceable. A blast of grape and one of chainshot would save the day just one salvo. But the guns were of as much use as a spar of driftwood on the sandy beach!"

"Ready your bayonets, dirks and cutlasses!" Goodbody said in a calm stage whisper as not 40 yards down the beach the last of the well-fed, well-equipped and woefully large detachment of raiders stepped out of the water. They would soon cut down the inadequate defending party, march across the salt dunes and via the marshes to the unfinished and unprotected rear of the fort. Col. Moultrie's men would not have a chance.

Lt. Goodbody lifted his ivory-handled dress sabre. "Fire!" he shouted grimly. A rattle of musketry broke over the dunes and red-coated marines fell here and there. The remainder of the raiders knelt in a straight formation and leveled rifles. A double blast of cannon fire came from a cable length back on the dunes. The six-pounders were in action!

A second and third salvo broke the British ranks, and the marines fled back into the water demoralized. Chief Eagle Claw ran crouching to the front line of defense.

"We make medicine with Niagara. Take plenty of powder from redcoat boat stuck on sand down bay. You want Pegram and O'Neill to stoomum plenty!" Goodbody turned his head to the west and made out the grinning renegades standing by their guns, swabs steaming. He smiled thinly. His sword flashed in greeting.

"Once again for Col. Moultrie and the liberty party!" he shouted across the hot salt sands.

GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Distributed by Central Press Association)

A cutting garden affords one ample flowers for indoor decoration and bouquets to delight friends and shut-ins without denuding the blooms in the main border.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, certain flowers with blooms consisting of innumerable flowers or a flower and side buds such as plinks, can be cut for the house when the main flower has had time to develop, as all the other surrounding buds will open in water.

Many of the Korean Chrysanthemums bloom too late for use as a garden flower but are ideal as cut flowers. They can be cut before any heavy frosts harm them. If only one bud is showing color, the other buds will be sure to open. They can

Preparation should be made for such lawn seeding or reseeding as it is to be done this fall so that it can be underway early next month. Bare spots or patches of perennial weeds should be dug up and the area refilled with good topsoil.

Vines which have made extra long growths may be headed back somewhat but pruning from now on till winter should be confined to repairing damages and removing sucker growths from stocks which have been top-grafted.

Among the vegetables, lettuce and radish seeds may be sown for a late

MINISTERS WILL HOLD SUMMER CONFERENCE

WESTMINSTER, Md., Aug. 14 (AP)—Plans neared completion today for the annual Westminster Summer Conference of Ministers, sponsored by the Washington Area Methodist church, to be held Aug. 25-29 at Western Maryland college and the Westminster Theological seminary. The conference, open to all ministers and their wives, is successor to a group sponsored for thirty years by the former Maryland conference. It is meeting for its second annual session in a five-day program given over to lecture periods and devotions.

Among guest speakers will be Prof. Andrew W. Blackwood, D. D., author of theological studies and professor of homiletics at Princeton Theological seminary. Dr. Blackwood will take "Evangelism and the Local Church—as his lecture theme. The Rev. Fred G. Holloway, D. D., president of Western Maryland college since 1935 and former president of Westminster Theological seminary will give a series of five addresses on the general theme of "New Testament Studies for Present Day Preaching."

Prof. Liston Pope, Ph. D., assistant professor of social ethics at the Gilbert L. Stark foundation, Yale University Divinity School, also will give a series of lectures on "Social Dilemmas of Contemporary Preaching."

An application for a Class D light beer license at Fairgo September 1 was filed in circuit court yesterday by William C. Smith on behalf of the Labor day celebration committee of the Western Maryland Industrial Union Council.

NEWSREEL FEATURING RACES AT FAIRGO NOW AT MARYLAND

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer newsreel containing scenes taken at Fairgo last week was screened yesterday at the Maryland theater, where it will be shown through Tuesday.

Giving Cumberland and its beautiful half-mile track national publicity, the newsreel was released yesterday in scores of other cities throughout the United States. The scenes taken here are shown in the sports section of the newsreel, with Bill Stern serving as commentator. The Fairgo feature runs about two and one-half minutes. The pictures were taken last week in connection with the appearance of Band Leader Paul Whiteman at the race meeting.

In 1939 Vermont dentists would "attend ladies at their homes" if requested.

Three Wives File Divorce Suits

Three divorce suits were docketed yesterday in circuit court. Non-support and cruelty are charged by Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Grey of Midland in a suit for a partial divorce from Robert Gray, Midland barber. The bill of complaint, filed by Morris Baron, attorney, says the couple was wed April 1, 1929, and lived together until last week.

Last Wednesday, Gray forced her and their eight-year-old son from their home after assaulting her, the suit charges, asking a restraining order to prevent him from molesting her in any way and also seeking payment of alimony and counsel fees.

Charging "constructive desertion," Mrs. Ethel Edna DeVore, of Grahamtown, docketed suit for a partial divorce from Leonard DeVore, also of Grahamtown.

The couple was wed December 4, 1926, according to the bill of complaint, docketed by Paul M. Fletcher, attorney, but although they still reside in the same house, they no longer live together as man and wife. The suit asks a court order to compel DeVore to leave the home, custody of three children and payment of alimony and counsel fees.

An absolute divorce from Lewis May is asked by Mrs. Mary Ruppert May in a suit filed by Edward J. Ryan, attorney. The couple was wed July 4, 1939, and separated June 18 of this year, according to the petition, which asks custody of a small daughter, payment of alimony and counsel fees and a court order restraining May from entering their home on Wills Creek avenue or interfering with Mrs. May in any way.

Meanwhile, James R. Growden docketed an answer to the divorce suit of Mrs. Ruth L. Growden and also filed a cross-bill of complaint. Growden represented by Julius E. Schindler, attorney, denies his wife allegation that he deserted her, countering it with the charge that she deserted him. The couple was wed December 27, 1925, and separated October 7, 1938.

Three Deeds Are Filed In Recorder's Office

Three deeds, nine mortgages, six chattel mortgages, one lease and twelve conditional sales contracts were filed for record yesterday in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

Deeds included: Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Dolly to Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Dolly, part of the James D. Pollock farm along the Potomac river, subject to a life interest in favor of Genetta B. Dolly. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Kile to Wheeler A. Boby, property along the McMullen highway in the Rawlings district.

Clarence Lippel, trustee, to Mr. and Mrs. Lorenza E. Watkins, property on Sunbury avenue near Holland street.

Aged Man Is Struck By Falling Tree Limb

George B. Hartman, 70, of Marysville, W. Va., was admitted to Memorial hospital yesterday suffering from lacerations of the forehead and a possible fracture of the skull.

Hartman was watching workmen trim a poplar tree on his property when a limb fell on him.

Accuracy Comes Ahead of Speed In Classrooms

But Average School Stresses Rapid Response, Dr. Myers Says

Almost parallel with the mania for speed in the physical world is that of the typical modern public school room. In the average school, particularly the elementary school, it is required that answers be given or certain things accomplished in a given time. It makes no difference about the accuracy of the answer, or precision, or skill, just so the response is rapid.

Emphasis on Quantity

Quantity of output is paramount: how many problems tried, how many lines read, how many words spelled, right or wrong. Try enough sums, and a goodly number might be right; read enough lines, and some might be comprehended; repeat enough words, and a few of them might be spelled correctly. But there is small consideration for cultivating in the learner the attitude of accuracy first; for helping him to gain an ideal of perfect mastery, or engendering in him a passion for precision.

Penalized for Being Slow

Should the pupil choose, despite the hurry atmosphere, to be right rather than rapid, he will be hounded for his slowness and penalized in his school marks. The average pupil in the elementary grades soon discovers that it doesn't pay to be painstaking when he studies or recites. On entering junior high school, he still finds that the hurry attitude prevails.

From the time the child enters kindergarten he is stimulated with dramatic snatches of head-line information to appreciate, which presupposes skills and knowledge that can be mastered only by those several years beyond him. Third and fourth grade children accordingly exposed to the "human interest" items from high school and college courses.

Pushed Ahead Too Fast

Passing on through the grades, the pupil is increasingly exposed to all sorts of "knowledge" dressed up in gaudy clothes, sometimes burlesqued. But what he really gets is often very indefinite and confused; frequently it is wholly incorrect.

The prevailing theory and practice of education offers youth but little encouragement for acquiring habits of hard mental work; nor is there much time at school allotted for his training in habits of precision. Fortunately, the foregoing does not apply to all schools.

Madrigal Singers Will Star at Music Festival

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 14 (AP)—Specialists in choral music of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries, Clarksburg's English Madrigal Singers will be the guest stars during the fourth annual Greenbrier Music Festival the night of August 16.

The Madrigal Singers, a ten-voice group developed by Clarence C. Arms, are a special ensemble picked from the Clarksburg Symphony choir.

The group does not perform as a choir. Each song is staged dramatically with costumes and settings to lend atmosphere to the selections.

The music they sing are the madrigals and glees with which Elizabethan Englishmen told the news and scandals of the day and preserved the customs and habits of their colorful era.

Their performance here will be a feature of the three-day festival which opens August 15.

HERE'S another great American accomplishment! Today—through free competition and huge demand—Gunther's can sell the working man a great PREMIUM BEER for the price of everyday beers!

In other words, the richest man on earth can't buy a glass of beer made from costlier malt, finer grain or more expensive hops!

Regardless of what YOU pay, you can't buy a finer beer than Gunther's. Those are facts. All other premium beers sell here for 15¢ or more. YET NONE OF THESE BEERS ARE MADE FROM MALT OR HOPS THAT COST MORE THAN GUNTHER'S!

Beers may claim to be made from "finest ingredients" or "quality ingredients" even though those ingredients are actually second or third grade in price!

Gunther's pays the top price... not only buys the highest priced malt and hops... but offers legal proof that this is true.

That's why more people... than ever before... say, "Maryland is famous for Gunther's!"

That's why you'll like Gunther's more... the more you drink of it!

PROOF THAT GUNTHER'S USES ONLY THE FINEST MALT. (ONLY 10% OF THE MALT BOUGHT BY BREWERS COSTS AS MUCH AS ALL THE MALT GUNTHER USES.)

Mayor John C. Freeland said that Fred Purgett, assistant city health officer, has been asked to see that all sewer openings are sprayed twice a week with kerosene to destroy the germ-bearing insects. Trojan President Suggests Shrine For Howard Jones

Kleinsmid Believes Field House Would Be Suitable Memorial

By LAWRENCE PERRY

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Los Angeles is trying to think up a fitting memorial for the late Howard Jones, football coach at the University of Southern California who bore the Trojan standard to the summit of gridiron achievement. No one but Dr. R. B. Van Kleeft, president of the university, has succeeded in devising a suitable shrine, so his suggestion is likely to carry.

Dr. Van Kleeft is a wise administrator and a very practical man — as all university executives have to be. So, combining sentiment with practicality, he has suggested a basketball field house. Howard Jones was associated solely with football, not basketball. But on the other hand the university lacks a basketball structure. It rents a building under conditions said not to be altogether satisfactory.

Precedent for a memorial of the sort is not lacking. Similar ones are found in the Hooey Baker Memorial hockey rink at Princeton and in stadia at various seats of learning throughout the country.

City Will Back Idea

Los Angeles, will of course, fall in with this, or any other project finally adopted. It will forget recent lapses in Trojan football and will remember, as it should, the great service rendered by Jones in taking hold of football at Southern California in 1925 and conducting the sport there to a position of equality with the nation's best.

Many close observers of West Coast football are not too sanguine about Trojan material this year. Those who knew Jones well believed he had made up his mind to retire as coach if his own doubts — which he had expressed to friends — concerning the quality of players on the 1941 squad were realized.

In such case those who look at facts clearly, not through the veil of sentiment, know that the great headman's resignation would have been received by Los Angeles, if not by university authorities, with outward expressions of regret and inward satisfaction. You are a great man while you are winning — and you are not so when you are losing. The fact that defeat is no fault of your own counts no more heavily in favor of a football coach than in behalf of a losing leader in any walk of life.

Be that as it may, the great impulse just now in the far thingy of Los Angeles is to remember all that Howard Jones did for the university — which was much — and to forget recent lapses which, in the last analysis, compared to his accomplishments, were little.

Versatile Barry

Speaking of Southern California basketball, this writer is reminded of the fact that Sam Barry, appointed to succeed Howard Jones as football coach, is a successful coach of the court game at the Trojan institution. He also coaches baseball and Southern California teams in both sports are always at the head or near the head. They are telling of a time when Barry's basketball team was playing an important game against a university of California five. As the Trojans appeared upon the floor the Golden Bear band struck up "Indiana My Indiana" — anthem of the Hoosier state university — a musical reference to the fact that all the first string members of the Southern California quintet hailed from Indiana. The music suddenly ceased when the leader of the band was bearded by a basketballer venomously hurled by the Trojan captain.

ments had been wiped out in the titanic struggle.

Silence Explained

Pravda cited invulnerable Russian defense as explanation for the Soviet in formation bureau's morning communique asserting that there had been no significant changes in the front line through Wednesday night.

The communique, however, again was bare of detail and gave no information on where the German pressure was being exerted.

In the face of this seeming reticence, the German high command issued three communiques. One said Nazi forces had reached the Black Sea between Odessa and the Bug estuary and that Luftwaffe bombers were pounding Russian ships preparing for a Red army sea retreat from a huge Ukraine pocket, the next that Odessa and the neighboring port of Nikolayev were encircled and the third that Nazi speed troops had reached the ore-rich region of Krivoi Rog far behind Odessa in the lower Dnieper basin.

Lists Destroyed Divisions

The army newspaper, Red Star, issued the list of German units claimed as destroyed and said twenty-one more German divisions — both infantry and tank — had suffered more than fifty per cent losses.

In round figures, the Red Star statistics mean German losses of between 280,000 to 300,000 men, based on averages of 15,000 men to an infantry division, 12,000 to a tank division and 1,000 to a regiment. These, however, are in a recapitulation going well back into the struggle with Germany.

The Big Three of Competition

There are three major factors in competitive sport—apart from such superior physical assets as speed and power.

As some sporting philosopher once remarked—"the race may not be to the swift—but that is where to look."

Usually—but not always. For the three major factors referred to play a big part in naming the winner, no matter what the sport.

These three leading elements are Form—Technique and Tactics. They are the big winners, where so many are so well matched on the physical side. They write most of the headlines.

And they are the least understood by the vast majority of those who play various games.

What They Are

Just what is Form—what is Technique and what are Tactics? I put the matter up to P. Hal Sims, bridge player and golfer, who has put in many careful thought along these lines through forty years of competitive effort.

"Form," says Mr. Sims, "is really style—the correct physical way of doing a thing. It is the popular current style, which often changes as new champions come along with different ways of playing games."

Technique is the best mathematical execution of form. I should say that technique is eliminating as much as you can the margin of error. It demands that you give more consideration to the percentage side.

Tactics is the handling or direction of form and technique together. It is planning out the right type of play.

"Many times the failure to observe technique puts on added pressure. All the mistakes you make increase pressure. In bridge for example the first mistake you make in bidding or playing the hand will increase the pressure enormously. The same is true in golf, which opens with the tee shot. If you miss this stroke, you waste right out in the middle of increasing pressure."

Angles of Competition

"I have always thought," P. Hal continued, "that Walter Hagen was always a master of technique and tactics. Hagen's angle is this—a golfer plants his tee shot into the rough, partially stymied by a tree. In place of accepting the penalty he has incurred by a bad shot, he tries to save himself by some miracle attempt. The odds against this attempt may be 10 to 1 or 15 to 1. If he would play out safely and then gamble on one pitch and one putt, the odds would be much less. And the penalty much lighter."

"How many average golfers will you see trying to play a wooden club from the rough? You'll see it often. They merely move from one trouble to deeper trouble, as a rule. By using the right technique they might still get a 4 on the hole or almost surely a 5. But overlooking the percentage matter completely, they wind up with a 6 or a 7. Most golfers could take away eight or ten strokes from their average rounds by using better technique."

The Case of Conn

"When Billy Conn met Joe Louis, Conn's boxing form was brilliant. His foot action and his hand action was all that any one could ask. He made you think of style—just as Jim Corbett once did."

"But Conn's technique in the 13th round suddenly blew up. He had taken the lead because he kept moving around, giving Louis a shifting target. But in the 13th round he suddenly turned flat-footed and began exchanging punches with a much better puncher."

"Many will tell you Conn became flat-footed through the body punishment he had taken in earlier rounds. I don't agree with this for the simple reason in the 12th round Conn was at his best, swarming all over Louis. It was this round that made him so badly overconfident that he forgot all about technique and tactics. He overlooked Old Man Mathematics or Old Man Percentage completely. You couldn't blame him too much for this. It was the first time he had ever been within two or three rounds of a heavyweight championship. He lacked at this point the coolness and the experience needed to carry along a winning plan, which he actually had."

"Suppose in the 13th round Conn, with a good lead already won, had kept jabbing, stabbing but always moving? He had shown he was a better and faster boxer than Louis was. Why throw aside a proved advantage and play the other fellow's game? That was bad technique—excusable, but still extremely costly. There are those who say that Louis would have caught him anyway. Perhaps. But against much greater odds, Louis was almost sure to beat Conn in a toe to toe slugfests. The odds at the odds were 4 to 1 on Louis. The odds at longer range boxing were 3 to 1 on Conn. See what difference this makes? Things like this happen in sport every day—in every game. Better form can't win alone. It must have help from technique and tactics." — North American Newspaper Alliance.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (The Special News Service).—The common idea of a prizefighter manager playing a flint-hearted, pudgy, "get in there and slug, kid, they can't hurt you" sort of gent who isn't worried so much over the cuts his warrior gets as those he himself bets out of the purses.

Al Weill can't be much of a fight manager. The only vague resemblance he has to the above description is that he might be called pudgy, speaking in a roundabout way. He looks like a diet which backfired.

Want To Stay Happily Wed? The Warren Williams Offer Sound Advice from Experience

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Williams, their dogs and their home

By MARION SIMMS
Central Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14.—"We men demand a lot from our wives, I'm afraid," says Warren Williams. "We expect them to be INTERESTING ANGELS."

After 14 years of marriage, Warren and his wife Helen, have some definite ideas on how they believe a marriage can endure in the nerve-racking confusion and strain of Hollywood.

"If, for instance, a wife learns early in married life that there are times when it is almost fatal to talk to her husband—it would save a lot of bad moments," began Warren Williams. "Like when he is shaving—ask any man about that!"

"If there is one time that calls for absolute concentration—and before breakfast at that—is it. A good or a bad shave sets the tempo for the whole day."

Another time when a man wants to be left entirely alone is when he isn't feeling well, is the emphatic opinion of Warren. Then he is something like a dog. "When a dog is ill he wants to crawl off by himself until he feels better. Of course, though, he likes to be babied when he is very sick. But when he is on the mend, and apt to be a little more irritable than usual, a wife must have infinite tact and patience."

Hats and Hats

Warren says he likes to tell his wife whether or not he approves of her choice of hats. Sometimes he makes her angry by telling her that her new bonnet is a fright. But he notices she gives it a fright. He wears it only when she thinks he won't be seeing her in it.

"Helen had a good laugh at my expense, though, when I happened to admire a hat on one of her friends the other day. It turned out to be one I had criticized when Helen brought it home, so she gave it away. It took me some time to live THAT down. I can tell you!"

Men like to sit down to a good table—a tip to the new bride, says Warren. And he always is flattered when his special tastes are catered to.

"I am always grateful, too," he continued, "when she is tolerant about my old clothes. I am constantly putting over something in my workshop—like to invent and experiment with things. And I like to get out in the garden—narrow and plough and build retaining walls like the ones I have just finished around some orange trees. I get terribly dirty, oily and grimy. Then, when I come into the house, I like to throw myself into a chair for a smoke before going up for my shower."

A wife could get dreadfully impatient about that, Warren agrees, and rightly so. But he must say for Helen that she looks completely unconcerned when he flops down in a new chair in his work clothes. She doesn't say a word. A man's reaction then is to think how grand it is to have a wife who is tolerant about such things. Chances are next time he'll look around for the oldest chair in the room to do his flopping in.

Pets, Too

Another thing—it helps a great deal if a husband and wife have the same tastes in pets. The Williams have several wire-haired terriers which are a nuisance at times, but Helen shares Warren's love and consideration for them.

"We suffer together when our pets dash off and get into mischief—like the time the two dogs did away with some of our neighbors' chickens," Warren reminisced. "Think what a family row there could have been if they had suddenly become MY dogs, instead of OUR dogs. It is amazing, too, just how many wives there are who would react in that unsportsmanlike fashion."

Gracefully acknowledging that a woman should have the last word on any subject, Warren left the marriage-discussion field to his wife, who had just come in from shopping.

Like her husband, Helen Williams has generous and sympathetic ideas on how to keep a marriage workable and happy, most of them identical with his. But she smiles, with fingers crossed for good luck, as she speaks of these things. It is not prudent to be too certain of anything—particularly a deep happiness. But she thinks perhaps there ARE some good solid reasons why Warren and Helen are among the few Hollywood couples of whom there has not been even the slightest gossip of divorce.

No Gloom at Dinner

"I have always tried to keep the house running to suit Warren's ideas," this charming wife admitted. "I usually try to have his favorite dishes as often as possible. And I save up pleasant and amusing little things to tell him with the first course of dinner. If something disagreeable has come up during the day and he has to know about it, I keep it to discuss after the coffee. When a man has had a good dinner and is puffing on his favorite pipe, he can cope with these things so much better. If I were giving advice to young brides, I think I should mention almost first—NEVER BRING UP UNPLEASANT SUBJECTS AT THE DINNER TABLE."

"Being careful of personal appearance can never be stressed too much," she said. "And find out the perfumes he likes best. Try to do your 'making up' behind your husband's back."

Helen is also a firm believer in NOT complaining and asking a husband to give up cigars or pipes unless smoking is absolutely distasteful to the wife.

Don't Be Suspicious

Giving a husband a certain amount of freedom is one important way of keeping him from having that hampered feeling that marriage sometimes brings, she believes. Don't think every time he is an hour or so late getting home that there is a woman in the case. Nothing upsets a man more than a suspicious woman, especially when he is the decent sort. If a man IS the kind who seeks other women's society, then not all the fretting and nagging on a wife's part is going to change him. In that case the wise thing is for her to get into the competitive field as speedily as possible, and try to have him so attracted that he cannot help making comparisons.

If it is possible to arrange, Helen Williams advises letting the husband have one room in the house that is absolutely his. Let him keep it tidy or untidy, as he pleases, and let the wife enter it only upon invitation.

Millions of words have been written on how to keep marriage successful. Warren Williams' wife sums it up neatly: A WOMAN MUST BE A FIRST-CLASS DIPLOMAT. Men have predominated in international diplomatic circles so far. But it is possible for every wife to be a mighty ambassador in her own home in preserving happy marriage.

Form Organization To Fight Pollution In Potomac Basin

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (AP)—A permanent organization for carrying on the program of the interstate compact for pollution control in the Potomac river basin was launched here today at a meeting of the Interstate Commission's executive board.

By act of Congress, the interstate compact was authorized recently to include Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. All members have ratified the compact except Pennsylvania.

At the meeting, at which all ratifying members were represented, F. W. Kittrell, for the past eleven years sanitary engineer for the Tennessee department of public health, was selected as chief engineer and secretary of the interstate commission, and establishment of permanent offices in the transportation building here was authorized.

Both actions are subject to routine confirmation by the full commission at its regular meeting to be held early in the fall.

Kittrell, who has spent nearly eighteen of his thirty-nine years in sanitary engineering work, will have active charge of the program, working in collaboration with the commissions set up by the member states.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Although the greatest military crisis of the German-Russian conflict is shaping up into the battle of Odessa, the Roosevelt-Churchill statement takes first place in the war news.

The chosen leaders of the British and American peoples proclaim their solidarity in the matter of the war aims. As for the current struggle they grimly imply that there can be no peace with Hitler or Hitlerism on any terms.

There have been widespread whispers in Europe that Hitler, at some point in his Russian campaign and before winter sets in to stalemate the war there, would launch a peace offensive. If so, he has been answered in advance so far as the president and prime minister are concerned.

Part of War-of-Nerves

The Roosevelt-Churchill sea meeting was definitely a part of the war-of-nerves. It goes without saying that the meeting was designed to impress upon Hitler's Japanese Axis mate and upon the Vichy regime in France the grim determination of the English and American leaders not to be diverted from their main objective of stamping out Hitlerism whenever it shows itself. There is also an open bid to the German people to throw off the Hitler yoke. It comes specifically in point four of the joint declaration, pledging the endeavor of the authors and the governments for which they spoke to secure economic equality of opportunity to "all states, great or small, victor or vanquished."

Would Undermine Hitler

That is an obvious attempt to undermine Hitler on his home front. His greatest appeal to many Germans known to view his Nazi regime with distrust is the argument that Britain with American backing is out to destroy Germany as a nation; to dismember and utterly disarm her economically as well as militarily.

American observers of long residence in Germany and only recently returned say Nazi propagandists have made much of that argument to induce dissenting elements in Germany to accept the Hitler-made war. They have been little prospect, however, that serious public opposition to Hitler or to his ever-widening war program can arise in a nation under the heel of the Nazi police system.

Steps

east, in the west and in sprawling and struggling Russia.

The leaders of the two great western powers gave no hint that the United States had been assigned any immediate part other than as "the arsenal of democracy" in a stepped-up effort to win the war against the Axis.

U. S. Course Uncertain
But neither was any indication from their pronouncement that the United States would remain indefinitely on a "short of war" basis in "the steps which their countries are respectively taking for their safety in the face of these dangers."

The time and place of the historic conferences, which rivaled or surpassed in world-interest the Brenner Pass meetings of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, remained secret.

The joint announcement in Washington and London said merely that the president and prime minister "have met at sea" and "have held several conferences."

They were flanked by high ranking army, navy and air force officers of the two nations, by diplomatic advisors and by officials immediately concerned with the problems of supply for "those countries actively engaged in resisting aggression."

Congress Divided

The meeting and resulting declaration drew immediate acclaim from congressional supporters of the president's foreign policy, but some other legislators objected that the agreements constituted an alliance with Great Britain. Other critical congressional comment included assertions that "it is tantamount to a declaration of war by this country, which is the province of Congress only."

But Senator Connally (D-Tex), chairman of the Foreign Relations committee, praised the declaration as embodying "principles of noble and lofty conception with which I feel sure the people of the United States will agree," and Senator Barkley (D-Ky), majority leader, said it would be "well received by all peoples resisting aggression."

In the words of Secretary of State Hull at his press conference, the statement embodied "basic principles and fundamental ideas and policies" that were "generally accepted by all civilized nations and were being strongly supported until certain countries decided to launch a universal movement to destroy the whole structure of civilized relations between nations and to establish a system of rule x x x based largely on barbarism and savagery."

The declaration of war aims closely followed a general policy statement by Secretary Hull in 1937 and also, with some elaboration, the objectives earlier proclaimed during the war by both the United States and Great Britain.

Plan to Police World

It contained in addition a virtual promise by the two great powers to police the world against "aggressor" nations for a time after the war.

The president and prime minister expressed the belief that "pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, the disarmament of such nations is essential."

They made a strong bid for support from conquered peoples and even from the German people by declaring that Britain and the United States seek no territorial or other "aggrandizement" and favor self-determination in fixing boundaries and choosing forms of government.

President Roosevelt's whereabouts at the time today's statement was issued was undisclosed but it was expected in the capital that he would return this weekend. The navy was still silent.

Whether Prime Minister Churchill was back in London also was not announced.

Where the meeting took place was a matter of speculation, some observers conjecturing that the president might have gone as far as Iceland, where both American and British occupying forces are stationed. Others speculated that Churchill flew or traveled by warship across the Atlantic and met the president, perhaps aboard a battleship off the Canadian coast.

London was elated, informed sources asserting that the United States committed itself to help reconstruct post-war Europe to support the British and Russians on every front, and to aid in stripping "aggressor" nations of their weapons.

In Berlin Nazi sources reported the declaration of "propaganda bluff."

bombers we have come from the United States."

Tanks?

"We have plenty of tank divisions and tank brigades but, despite the fact that we have produced a great many, we haven't got enough tanks. We want many."

Food?

"We're working our men very hard, long hours and on Sunday and they require lots of food. We like—and need—bacon and beef and cheese—which our agricultural workers live on—and other food supplies."

When asked whether Britain expected to win the war in the air Lord Beaverbrook stuck out his jaw, glowered, and shouted:

"Bombing from the air didn't beat us!"

Substitutes To Be Used in New Cars

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (AP)—Elimination of all decorative trimmings from new automobiles and use of substitutes for scarce materials in all non-functional parts was decided upon at a conference today of representatives of the motor industry and defense officials.

No definite action will be taken, however, until the Office of Production Management issues an order, officials said. The order is expected to be drafted soon.

The critical materials to be conserved include aluminum, chrome, nickel, zinc, copper and rubber. The automobile makers said some of these would have to be used in transmissions, gears, brakes, and other essential operating parts.

The conference agreed to the complete elimination of aluminum pistons, but rejected a suggestion that brass be used instead of copper for radiators. It also was agreed to discontinue the use of sponge rubber in car cushions.

Officials declined to forecast when the changes would be put into effect.

The period of summer we know as dogs days was named by the ancients as pertaining to the rising in the sky of the Dog star, Sirius.

the president to hold selected national guardmen, reservists and enlisted men for 18 months beyond their present service periods. That would mean maximum service of two and a half years for reservists, guardmen and reservists and four and a half years for men who enlisted originally for three years.

Congress Could Act

By adopting a concurrent resolution, Congress could terminate the chief executive's power to extend the service periods. On the other hand, if it adopted a resolution stating that extension beyond the eighteen extra months was "in the interest of national defense," the president could continue the service periods indefinitely.

The bill grants a $10 pay increase to all army men who have served twelve months. The raise would be retroactive and would not mean the president proclaimed the national emergency ended.

Beach Sunburn Patrol, Once Just a Gag, Grows Up To Prevent a Million Freckles

By The Staff Service
CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP)—Pretty little (Bunny) Lowery figures that the Clearwater Beach sunburn patrol has prevented at least a million freckles and as many blisters among others who don't know when they've had enough sun.

Organized four years ago more or less as a stunt, the patrol was so successful in preventing severe sunburn among bathers—a major summer beach hazard—that it has been made one of the main features of this resort's safety organization.

Bunny and her shapely assistants, in uniform white bathing suits with identifying insignia on the front, keep an eagle eye on bathers from boardwalks—who all too often try to acquire a deep suntan in one day.

"You'd be surprised," Bunny says, "how few beach bathers from out of town know how much sun they can stand. And even when we warn them, it's hard to get 'em to cover up."

Each patrol girl has a safety kit with sunburn lotion as well as first aid equipment for treating cuts and scratches. All are expert swimmers and act as lifeguards. Miss Lowery was the beach's first lifeguard back in 1937.

The patrol also gives swimming lessons and, as might be expected of a school with so comely a faculty, has whopping enrollments. During the first four years, enrollments totaled 3,000, and this season the number has passed 1,500.

Katherine Ann King of the Clearwater Beach sunburn patrol applies lotion to ease the suffering (?) of C. S. Campbell.

"Blossoms in Dust" Is Moving Drama of Woman

With Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon as its stars, M-G-M's technicolor production, "Blossoms in the Dust," which opened today at the Maryland theater is one of the finest pictures of this year or any year.

Departing from the usual run-of-the-mill cinema fare, the film tells the story of a woman who found solace caring for hundreds of unwanted children after her own baby dies. Inspired by the life of Edna Gladney, superintendent of the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society, the struggles and obstacles met and conquered by the pioneers in the field of child welfare are brought forcibly to the screen for the first time.

Never before has Miss Garson appeared as breath-takingly lovely as she does in the color medium which succeeds in emphasizing the glory of her red-gold hair and green eyes. Again she plays the type of heroine she does so well. Miss Garson's Edna Gladney is a worthy successor to her "Mrs. Chips" and Elizabeth Bennet. Equally fine is Walter Pidgeon in a virile characterization as Sam Gladney, Texas mill owner. Their romance takes its place among the screen's memorable love stories.

The picture opens with Edna Gladney as a belle of the Gibson Girl Era. Her meeting with the dashing Texas man, Sam Gladney, their whirlwind courtship, subsequent love story, mutual struggles to establish a real home for abandoned youngsters in the unfolding of the story. One of the highlights of the film is the suicide of Miss Garson's girlhood chum when she learns she is an illegitimate child. Later, this incident helps spur the heroine on in her fight to forever free such children from the stigma of their birth. Marsha Hunt is excellent as the girl and her scene one of the most moving in the entire picture.

Fonda and Bennett Teamed in Film

Twentieth Century-Fox has made a picture from an outstanding novel, Stewart Edward White's great adventure story of the Northwest, "Wild Geese Calling," opens today at the Strand theater.

Henry Fonda, as the two-fisted lumberjack with a love for the outdoors, gives the finest performance of his career, even surpassing his great portrayal of Tom Joad in "The Grapes of Wrath." And Joan Bennett, as Sally, the dance hall queen, is superb in an entirely new kind of role.

All the action, drama and romance of this fine story of the great Northwest, which was awarded the gold medal of the Commonwealth Club of California as the outstanding novel written by a resident of the state in 1940, has been retained in the film. The interesting story of wandering John Murdoch, played by Fonda, who meets and falls in love with Sally while looking for his friend Blackie who has been faithfully followed.

Marrying Sally, John takes her to Alaska, not knowing that she and Blackie had been friends before he met her. Angry when he finds Blackie holding Sally in his arms, John assaults his friend and leaves his wife, thus setting the stage for the unusual climax.

Excellent support has been given the two stars by the supporting cast which includes Warren William as Blackie, Ona Munson and Barton MacLane. The fine direction of John Brahm is responsible for the sustained drama and steady pace of the film. The interesting screen play was written by Horace McCoy. Harry Joe Brown was the producer.

CAN'T BE BEAT!

Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett are starred in Stewart Edward White's "Wild Geese Calling," the new Twentieth Century-Fox picture due today at the Strand theater. Ona Munson and Warren William are importantly featured.

"East Side Kids" Score In Wildest Film

There is one thing to be said for practically every picture starring the "East Side Kids"—it is almost certain to be imbued with that particular flavor and individuality that is so much a part of those boisterous rowdies.

For some reason there is a zest and a tang to these photoplays that stamp them in a class of their own. Such a picture is Monogram's "Bowery Blitzkrieg" starring the "East Side Kids" with Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall, Warren Hull and Charlotte Henry. The film opened yesterday at the Embassy theater.

"Bowery Blitzkrieg" has all the elements necessary for an entertaining picture—action, comedy, suspense and drama. Director Wallace Fox, assisted by some tip-top performers from an able cast, has welded these elements into a sound, well developed product.

The story is deftly written and believable. It is the saga of Muggs McGinnis, a tough young character who rules the east side with an iron fist. Muggs, played by Leo Gorcey, finally gets in one fight too many and winds up in reform school.

Other members of the cast include Bobby Stone, Donald Haines, David Gorcey, Jack Mulhall, Martha Wentworth and Keye Luke.

Wallace Fox directed "Bowery Blitzkrieg" from a screenplay by Sam Robins. Brendan Wood and Don Donmullahy wrote the original story. Sam Katzenbach produced.

Charles Starrett Stars In "The Durango Kid"

Two-fisted Charles Starrett, considered by many to be America's new action star, returns triumphantly to the Garden theater's screen in Columbia's "The Durango Kid," considered by many to be his most taut and exciting western thriller. Luana Walters provides the romantic role, while Sons of the Pioneers carry the musical end. Lambert Hillyer directed.

Police work is an old experience for Warren William, currently featured in the title role of "The Lone Wolf Keeps A Date," now playing at the Garden theater. William got his first taste of it during World War I when he was assigned to intelligence duties with the American forces overseas.

Fayetteville, N. C., near Fort Bragg, was the first town in the United States to be named for the Marquis de Lafayette.

Dietrich and Robinson In Film Wedding

The wedding of Marlene Dietrich and Edward G. Robinson was solemnized riotously in the presence of a group of clip joint hostesses, power company men and actors. Harry Holman, a justice of the peace whose palm itched for $5, officiated. The bride wore a slinky black dress.

Their marriage was the outstanding social event of the season on Warner Brothers Stage fifteen, where Raoul Walsh, whose formula is "action and combat," was directing "Manpower," a comedy-drama about high power linemen and their women. "Manpower" opens at the Liberty today.

The ceremony got under way when Alan Hale thrust his head in a door and yelled that he wanted a Jaypee to splice a couple hot wires.

Frank McHugh came close behind demanding to know what happened at weddings.

"Well, your father and mother got married, didn't they?" snorted Hale. "Yes, but I wasn't there."

Miss Dietrich, Mr. Robinson and their attendants, all hooting gleefully, swarmed in and around the fat little Jaypee in a corner of the living room. Joyce Compton and Eve Arden, B Girls, wore red dresses and flirted with men.

The ceremony itself went off with the clatter of a tobacco auction. Harry Holman, experienced in these matters during a long career of screen marriages, rattled off the ceremony with a minimum of effort.

Edward G. Robinson, whose screen name is Hank, was serious and embarrassed throughout the ceremony.

"I now pronounce you man and wife—five-dollars—please," said Harry Holman, as if the phrase were one word.

George Raft, dour throughout the gay scene, kissed the bride with stony reluctance. Alan Hale ducked. He said his brother once got into trouble kissing a bride. Trouble was it was two years later.

In the midst of chatter, Director Walsh called "cut."

Marlene Dietrich hurried off to have lunch with George Raft. Edward G. Robinson hurried back to his dressing room to see if that cigar he left there was still burning.

Poultrymen Meet

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 14 (AP)—The relationship of raising chickens to the national defense effort was studied by state poultrymen at the opening today of their annual conference sponsored by the West Virginia Agricultural Extension Service.

Instructors at the two-day school include Dean C. R. Orton of the university's College of Agriculture, Dr. P. M. Cellar and C. C. Blake of the state agricultural department.

TENDER LOVE STORY

Walter Pidgeon, breaking the news of the loss of his fortune to Greer Garson in this scene from "Blossoms in the Dust," tells her that they can make a fresh start. As Sam and Edna Gladney in the new Technicolor production which opened today on the Maryland screen, Pidgeon and Miss Garson enact one of the tenderest love stories ever screened.

Wasp Stings Spider

MIDDLEBOURNE, W. Va., Aug. 14 (AP)—Town Sergeant Hern Wheeler's pet spider "Podunk" recently became the victim of his own appetite.

The officer related that he would sweat flies and drop them into "Podunk's" web. The spider would immediately carry them away.

A wasp fell under the officer's swatter by mistake and landed in the spider's mesh. "Podunk" thought it was another meal and took after it. The stunned wasp recovered, however, stung "Podunk" and now Wheeler is looking for a new pet.

Two Convicts Captured

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Aug. 14 (AP)—Liberty was short lived today for two more state penitentiary inmates whose brief getaway brought to eleven the total who have escaped in the last ten days. Four of them have been recaptured.

Warden M. E. Ketchum reported that Jack Moody, 31-year-old life term from Logan county, and Garland Williams, 204, serving ten years from Harrison county for breaking and entering, were returned to their cells a few hours after they had been missed at the mess roll call.

Rail and Industrial Stocks Lead Main List Out of Long Stalemate

Dealings Are Slack, but Fractional Gains Pre- dominate

By BERNARD S. OHARA

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP)—Mild trading for rails and scattered industrial today helped the stock market break one of the longest stalemates in the history of the exchange.

While dealings were slack throughout, financial gains predominated at the close and enabled the Associated Press average of sixty issues to emerge with a net advance of 1 of a point at 43.1, the first improvement in this composite since July 26. The upturn was far from unanimous. Of 642 stocks traded, 255 were up, 191 down and 196 unchanged.

Transfers of 415,260 shares were the smallest for any full session since July 2. They compared with 420,740 Wednesday.

The consensus in boardrooms was that the Roosevelt-Churchill statement of politics, drawn up at a sea conference and released for publication at 10 a. m. today, was more strong; good and choice 13.00-50; rather lenient sorting common and medium 10.00-12.00; light culls 7.50-9.50.

Hogs: 700; mostly 10 higher than Wednesday; practical top 11.80; good and choice 10.00-11.50; 100-180 lbs 11.35-80; 220-235 lbs 11.45-70; 150-160 lbs 11.30-55; 140-150 lbs 11.20-45; 130-140 lbs 10.95-11.20; 20-130 lbs 10.75-11.00; 240-260 lbs 10.85-11.10; 260-300 lbs 10.55-85; packing sows 9.10-60.

Sheep: 650; market not established on spring lambs; undertone weak to lower; few sales good and choice ewes and wethers 11.00-50; asking above 11.50 on some rail arrivals.

Sea Scouts Will Stage Regatta at Deep Creek Lake

Yacht Club Aiding Potomac Council Groups in Activities

A regatta by Sea Scouts of Potomac Council Boy Scouts of America will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Deep Creek Lake Yacht Club. It was announced yesterday. Commodore Henry Duke of the yacht club said facilities for camping and special Sea Scout activities have been made available by the club and members of the club will conduct a special sailing race Sunday afternoon with Sea Scouts serving as crews.

Three newly-formed Sea Scout Patrols in Potomac Council are planning to participate. This is their first attempt at a regatta and many of the activities they undertake must necessarily be elementary. It is a hope, however, of Scout officials that this will be the first of an annual event which will grow in popularity.

Scout Executive W. Jack Watson of Washington, Pa., and two experienced Sea Scout leaders accompanied by 10 Sea Scouts have been promised to participate in the regatta. Inasmuch as these leaders and Scouts have participated in cruises on the Chesapeake Bay and have had other Sea Scout experience, they have agreed to conduct a course of instruction on "Ship Operations."

Rope splicing, rowing, buoy throwing and special ship drills are other activities planned.

JOHN LOUIS WOLFORD TO RECEIVE DIPLOMAS AT AIR CORPS FIELD

Formation flying planes will fly over the field in congratulations to the new officers as Col. Albert L. Sneed, west commandant, presents the diplomas.

'Daily Double' Fails To Show at Kiwanis

Members of the Kiwanis club had a typical race week experience yesterday when both ends of their "daily double" failed to show at their weekly luncheon-meeting at the Port Cumberland hotel.

It had been planned to have talks by Mrs. Katherine E. Byron, Sixth district representative in Congress, and Dr. H. C. "Curly" Byrd, president of the University of Maryland. Both were here Wednesday for Cumberland day at the fair, but neither was able to remain in the city for the Kiwanis meeting.

An abbreviated program was the result, with most of the time devoted to skirmishes in the attendance contest now under way. Fred G. Dodge, vice-president, presided in the absence of Harvey H. Weiss, president.

WOMEN'S VOLUNTARY SERVICE UNIT WILL MEET IN SEPTEMBER

Plans to establish a unit of the American Women's Voluntary Services in Cumberland have met with a most encouraging response from local women and efforts will be made to hold a meeting of all those interested early in September, according to Bess T. MacCulloch, organizer.

Services of all those joining the organization are voluntary. Fourteen courses, including first aid, home hygiene, motor mechanics, Morse code and air field dispatcher are offered to members, all of whom must be American citizens.

Those who have made application for membership will be notified by mail when the first meeting will be held. In the meantime others interested are requested to communicate with Bess MacCulloch, 729 Gephart drive, or call telephone 2002-R.

An opportunity for fifty boys and girls of Cumberland to appear in a safety movie today was announced yesterday by representatives of the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

The first fifty bicycle-riding boys and girls registering with the desk sergeant at police headquarters will be eligible. Cumberland has been selected for the movie because of this city's model bicycle ordinance.

Bicycle travel and modern dangers of such travel along with the history of these vehicles will be shown. The effects of Cumberland's ordinance, its enforcement and the general results of the regulations will also be part of the movie.

Gray Chapter

If you have been to the movies in Cumberland lately, you have probably seen the United States new eighty-two ton bomber, the B-29.

The insurance on the craft, which made its first trial flight recently, is believed to be a new high in aviation coverage. For the first sixty seconds of the initial flight, the premium amounted to $80,000. After that first all-important minute, the premium was reduced to $3,000 a month.

Chatter does not know what is the most descendants that anyone in Cumberland has but has just run across an interesting story showing that R. B. McComas, of Pinoak, Mercer county, W. Va., has a total of 257 descendants.

McComas, who lives with his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Crotty, at Pinoak, has six children—all living—and fifty-one grandchildren, 169 great grandchildren and thirty-one great great grandchildren.

McComas at the age of ninety-three is yet active and earns a living making chairs. He recently sold one to a woman from Pennsylvania for $5. He was once a member of the Mercer County Court and was the owner of considerable coal land in his territory, which he leased to coal interests.

An Selective Service registrant who was deferred from military training and subsequently reclassified by his local board has the same right to appeal as when he was classified originally. Lt. Col. Henry C. Stanwood, state director of Selective Service announced today.

Stressing particularly its application to cases of registrants whose periods of deferment for occupational reasons expire, Col. Stanwood cited a memorandum just issued by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service which clarifies Selective Service Regulations affecting the appeal rights of registrants.
